What do you do when you have TWO HOAs? This hoa madness has got to stop. Requiring you and your house belong to TWO hoas for a single family in a single house is now very common in areas like Washington.

There would and will surely be conflicts in the requirements of what you're not allowed to have and do and what you must have and do.

I was at Burgwe King one day and overheard another guy talking about his neighbor who keeps calling the cops and hoa on him every single day for breaking the hoa rules.

He thought his blue car was okay since the hoa rules requires you must have ONLY a blue car. No other colors or shades are allowed.

She called the cops on him and reported him to the hoa for illegally breakinng the law by illegally having a light blue car against hoa rules instead of a blue car as required.

Towed and impounded. So next he bought a car ONE shade darker to be in compliance. No manufacturer makes a shade between what he had which was towed and impounded and what he bought to be in compliance.

She called the cops on him and reported him to the hoa for illegally breaking the law by illegally having a dark blue car instead of a blue car as required.

Towed and impounded and once again fined by the hoa.

Now, since he was only middle class, he could not afford a third car.

So he started taking the public bus to work.

She called the cops and reported him to the hoa for that. She did not like seeing the public bus in the neighborhood.. according to her, he was now breaking several hoa rules at the same time since "taking the public bus lowers the property values of the houses since only poor people take public transportation and buses to work and elsewhere and violates the hoa rules against "residents are not allowed to do anything which lowers property values" and the hoa rules against "no obnoxious activities allowed"

among others.

In this last case, about the bus, the cops told him to just keep doing what he is doing since he's not doing anything illegal. (according to the cops).

Of course that didn't and doesn't stop his hoa from saying it is indeed illegal to take a public bus even when it stops on a public street in front of the hoa since it lowers the property values of the hoa homes since only poor people ride public buses and public transportation (according to the hoa) and that's the impression other people get of the neighborhood when they see him getting on or off the public bus. 9according to the hoa) and fining him for it.

Which he can't afford since he's only middle class.

Also even when she just sees him outside waiting for the bus to come, she reports him for it daily. Even when she doesn't see him waiting for it, such as if he comes out of his house right before getting on, she reports him for it.

Because she doesn't like to see public buses since she equates them with "undesirable poor people who I don't want to see in this neighborjhood because they don't make as much money as I think they should make to be desirable people" despite enviromental groups trying to get everyone to ride public buses instead of driving cars.

Having owned scanners for almost 20 years, I currently have a collection of Yupiterus, 7100, 9000, and a 3300.
For Shortwave I have a Sangean doing a great job with most SW,but a little below par with LSW/USB comms.
With Digital TV and Digital comms around us now, these do not seem to be capable of receiving digital comms.
I have been tempted lately of moving on to an AOR 8200 Mk3 and since acquiring a MACBOOK Pro lap top , the computer control of the AOR interests me.
While I realize that the AOR is not likely to make any inroads to receiving digital,at least one of these could keep my interest going.
Has anyone found a way to receive digital comms,especially TV sound on any scanners currently available ?
Should I ditch my Yupiteru 9000 for an AOR ?
I cannot bear to part with the 7100 though,it is rarely ever turned off,while the 3300 is fitted into my car, it is not in the same class as the other Yupis. In fact I do not have a manual and only was able to programme it due to my experience with the other Yupiterus

10. why is a legal antenna all of a sudden illegal just because you changed the station on your radio???

Why is an antenna on a Grundig YB 400PE radio that is legal and not against hoa rules all of a sudden an illlegal antenna against hoa rules just because you changed the station on your radio?

In other words, what makes it all of a sudden become " a ham antenna" or "a cb antenna" just because you changed the station from a fm broadcast station or an am broadcast station to a ham station or cb station?

It's the same frickin' antenna on the same frickin' radio.

If it's a ham antenna or cb antenna when it's tuned to a ham or cb station, then it's a ham antenna when it's tuned to a am/fm broadcast station and not to a ham or cb station.

If it's not a ham antenna or cb antenna when tuned to an am/fm broadcast station, then it's not a ham antenna or cb antenna when tuned to a ham or cb station.

It's the SAME friuckin' antenna on the SAME frickin' radio.

How about when it's tuned to a frequency which picks up both broadcasts and hams at the same time.

you pro-hoa nazis say there's no such thing and never was.

Well, you're wrong as usual. Part of the 7 mhz band used to be used by both broadcasters and hams, and still is from what I hear on it, although it's not supposed to be being used by broadcasters anymore.

The SAME frequency was sometimes a broadcaster, then later a ham radio operator in the SAME night and vice versa. And sometimes it was both a broadcaster and ham radio operator at the EXACT SAME TIME.

So what it is it then, a legal broadcast antenna allowed by hoas or an illegal ham radio antenna not allowed by hoas???

I don't understand this new radio theory that the EXACT SAME FRICKIN antenna on the EXACT SAME FRICKIN radio is a legal antenna nott against hoa rules and not a ham antenna when tuned to an am/fm/sw broadcast station all of a sudden becomes an illegal ham antenna when the tuning knob on the radio is turned from 1100 khz to 28700 khz and becomes an illegal cb antenna when the tuning knob on the radio is tuned to 27185 khz.

Why don't you list it in your rules then that homeowners are not allowed to tune their indoor portable radios to anywhere on the dial the radio can cover, but only to the stations.the hoa says the residents are allowed to tune to?

Oh and since you'tre doing that anyways, why not add a clause that also says which broadcast tv stations the residents are and are not allowed to watch inside the privacy of their own homes???

And which cable tv stations the hoa residents are and are not allowed to watch inside the privacy of their own homes???

You hoas are against everything the founding fathers of this country stood for and everything this country stood for and is supposed to still stand for.

All you hoas should be outlawed permanently.

IT'S THE SAME FRICKIN ANTENNA ON THE SAME FRICKIN RADIO.

My signature is NOT on any hoa contract. I NEVER signed any such thing. I do NOT even live on hoa property. I live in a non-cc&r non-Hoa house and on non-CC&R non-HOA land as I previously stated.

Actually, FCC has been clear about this. You can't sign away those rights to HOA's. A licensed amateur, CB operator, may have an exterior antenna. And the equal housing laws say you have the right to live anywhere you choose, so he may put up an antenna, and the HOA may not compel him to remove it.

Further, TV and small dish satellite antennae are protected species. They can't be removed by HOA fiat, either.

And...(ahem....apologies to Garrett Morris) IF YOU ACTUALLY READ
THE POST, HE SAID HE LIVES ON AN NON HOA PROPERTY.

As, in fact, do I.

Sadly, and in fact, many HOAs are not aware of the FCC exoneration, so the silly, angry malcontents hire an attorney to force an Injunction upon the Ham operator. (Sorry, but CB ops are not included Peter)
What results is a often construed and costly legal action for both parties, only to find that the HOA was in the wrong. All too many lawyers are not aware of the FCC regulations and when they side with the HOA, and after several hours and hundreds of dollars later, the HOA ends up with a hefty legal fee.
What I have seen many times over is that the complaining neighbors don't like the FCC exemption and will continue to bicker with the Ham neighbor over their perceived "property value devaluation". They claim that they are getting TVI, RFI, or other issues with their electronic devices when, in actuality, it is almost always a nearby CB type who is causing the problem.

Also, our city recently made an attempt to ban those small satellite TV dishes that are appearing. The city wanted to ban the dishes to the back yards or the rear of the homes. A local Ham op became involved and set the City straight and the Mayor and his City Council dropped the ordinance from the books.

It seems to be that using a first initial with the middle name and last name is all the rage amongst self-important attorneys these days. (not that D. Peter is an attorney) Doing so is more of a fashion/style thing than a necessity, but if it makes them feel apart from and more important than Joe Sixpack, let them revel in their self-perceived folly.

D. Peter...it is because of you and your ilk that I refuse to join the ARRL.
It is because of you and your ilk that I prefer to not join in on the various Ham radio special events.
I enjoy Amateur Radio as a hobby, and have been doing so for 25 years now.
Unlike you, I don't eat, live and drink Amateur Radio. It is a friggin' hobby, for crying out loud!
I don't appreciate you or your other self-appointed buddies "suggesting" when, where and how I should operate my station. I will do it my way, and will do so without your "guidance".

73 O M. Catch you on 30M if you are lucky...

Bravo for you. A good example is someone driving from pa to ohio to michigan. or vice versa.

If someone in Ohio is talking to so someone in pa, they get yelled at that they're not following the band plan, then when they switch to follow the band plan they're told to, the other operator gets yelled at thet they're not following the band plan.

So what is a person living near the state line supposed to do, use the Ohio bandplan or the PA bandplan??

No, using the bandplan of the state you're currently in (as suggested in these newsgroups long ago) does NOT work.

When driving from your job in the one state to your home in another state, and you're talking to your friend, then you cross the state line while you're friend is at home in the other state, if you both switch to the bandplan of the state you're in, then your friend gets yelled at for not following the bandplan. If you remain following the bandplan of the state you're friend is in, then you get yelled at for not following the bandplan.

The same for Michigan and Ohio.

And it gets even more complicated when you're having a three way conversation between Michigan, Ohio, and PA repeaters and/or simplex.

So yes, I also will use my amateur radio on any frequency I want to any way I want to, within FCC rules.

I have already noticed at least FOUR different 2 meter bandplans that can be heard and contacted from my area.

There may be more, but as of this writing, I only know of four.

What is simplex for some is repeater inputs for the others.

What are repeater outputs is simplex for some.

Now, which of the FOUR bandplans should I use?

If I want to use the repeaters, I don't have any choice except to violate one or more of the bandplans.

If I want to use simplex, I don't have any choice but to violate one or more of the bandplans.

The usual answer to this is to follow the ARRL bansplan.

Wrong, the ARRL bansplan says local bandplans superceded the ARRL bandplan.

There are FOUR DIFFERENT local 2 meter bandplans in this area.

So again, which of the FOUR bandplans should I use?

It is really hard for "Me" to believe that you (RadioGuy) are this STUPID. but the again we see your kind on JayWalking all the time....

BandPlans are nothing more than a convention used by local, regional and country Ham Organizations to structure a working agreement for cooperative use of Licensed Frequencies. They hold NO Force of Law, beyond that specified in Part 97.

If you were not such a DUFUS, you would understand this from the getgo...
Maybe you are "To Stupid to be Licensed"... Has that thought ever occurred to you...

Around here, they are. They stood up for themselves against a local HOA, and they won, under the same provisions as Hams.

22. frs/gmrs radios are illegal in New York and Kentucky while mobile and in Indiana eben while portable

Every FRS/GMRS radio I have seen all scan. Therefore, they are definitely scanners.

Since the deseral exemption applies only to ham radio operators and even then only to ham radio transcievers which can also scan out of band, and not to any other type of scanner.

It is against the law to use a frs/gmrs radio while mobile in New York, Kentucky and a few other states.

And in Indiana, not only is it illegal to use your frs/gmrs radio while mobile, it's also against the law for you or your kids to use your frs/gmrs while portable (while walking around outside of your house since thast is "in puiblic". where the public can see you.

Cops have already illegally confiscated ham hts they see in vehicles.

Sometimes the ham can get out of it by showing the cop their fcc-issued ham license.

And somerimes not. i read that the LAPD does not and will not accept federally FCC-issued ham licenses as proof of license and that they only accept proof of being licensed to use your ham radio if the ham radio permit was issued by the LAPD. from what I read posted elsewhere.

But what does a unlicenced frs user do when a cop sees their frs radio which doesn't even cover gmrs frequencies in the car?

It's still a scanner, but in that case, the driver has no radio license to show to the cop since it's FRS and a GMRS license wouldn't cover it anyway, even if the radio was one of the newer fts/gmrs radios and the driver was a gmrs licensee since federal law doesn't erxempt gmrs licensees, only ham licensees.

It's also against the U.S. Constitution to apply laws unequally to U.S. citizens.

Therefore, to remain constitutional, either ALL citizens including hams must be banned from having radios capable of scanning while in their vewhicles or ALL citizens including non-hams must be allowed to have radios capable of scanning the exact same frequencies while driving.

You are way off base on this. Read the Indiana scanner law and how it pertains to POLICE radios...NOT GMRS or non police use frequencies.

Read it slowly. And then read it again.

And in Indiana, not only is it illegal to use your frs/gmrs radio while mobile, it's also against the law for you or your kids to use your frs/gmrs while portable (while walking around outside of your house since thast is "in puiblic". where the public can see you.

This is just so much Bovine Manure that I can only laugh.

What SHOULD be illegal is dimwits such as yourself walking the streets, especially "in puiblic"

I have been driving for years without any accidents, sometimes while talking on a radio, sometimes not,

Then one day, my nost nimby neighbor started complaining about the way
I was driving (the way where I never had any accidents at all) because the way I was , had been, and was still driving was and is offensive to her and a gives a bad impression of the neighborhood thereby lowering her property values.

and then this same nosy nimby neighbor proceeded telling me how I should be driving and the ONLY correct way (to her) for me t o drive.

The result: I was in an automobie accident.

So if states and cities want to ban using crll phones without a hands

to the driver in a car.

Because it's a fact that backseat drivers are more dangerous than and cause even more accidents than talking on a cellphone
without a hands

If you get stopped for a violation, answer to the violation first.
The cop is not going to look at your radio and ask you if it is a GMRS, FRS, or a friggin' CB.

OTOH, if your radio is receiving police frequencies, you WILL be asked about that.

Since GMRS, FRS and CB radios do not receive Public Safety frequencies, you are good to go.

In Indiana, the posession of a radio that receives police frequencies is a misdemeanor. An officer can confiscate the scanner and arrest you via citation OR can take you into custody. For most first offenses the officer will cite and release and your scanner will be returned to you after your Court Hearing.
Indiana police officers do not make arrests for those who wander around in public while using FRS or GMRS radios.
Radioguy is lying. He is a troll.

The law is preposterous and illegal, of course -- there is no Constitutional justification for making mere possession of anything a crime (just because a criminal might use a cast iron skillet to bash you on the head and take your money doesn't mean legislators have any right to criminalize skillet possession), and if someone causes radio waves to pass through your property or body, you certainly have the common law right to demodulate (or do anything whatever to) those waves.

But, if charged, one has to be realistic and realize that the mental abilities of many judges and jurors are too low to understand the above -- especially since they've been propagandized almost from birth with the false idea that legislators can make any laws they choose.

But one could still be free from the scanner prohibition, as long as you operate a news blog, since the section of the pretended law I quote above exempts anyone who is "regularly engaged in newsgathering activities."

With all good wishes,

That's been a "fad" for decades - watch some 1940's movies some time to see how various "holier than thou" people would adopt such a moniker (often for comedy and often at their own expense)...

Based on the reading, I am not even sure that a scanner capable of receiving police frequencies is illegal unless it is used to commit a crime or hinder emergency services (although it is easy to see how the law could be construed to mean otherwise). The law allows the use of a "police radio" (let's assume for a minute that this means a scanner or a Realistic Patrolman portable) during the course of a person's otherwise lawful business. That could be practically anything a person does from making breakfast to driving the kids to school to fishing under the old sycamore tree.

What you laugh at, sleeves not withstanding, is your affair, and of no interest to anyone but you.

Actually, I'm a broadcaster. I have always gone by "Pete" or "Peter." The 'D.' is part of my signature, nothing more. My grandfather called "Pete." My parents called me "Pete." But for official purposes, the signature has always been "D. Peter" or "David Peter," since I was taught how to write.

Why this bothers you, or why you think you should have input on the practice is beyond ken.

But you feel free to make this about me.

My post was actually about something far more important. And, repeating, I'm actually on your side: You SHOULD be able to decide 'where and how I should operate my station. I will do it my way, and will do so without your "guidance".'

But again, feel free to make this about me.

The term DOES NOT include a radio designed FOR USE ONLY IN A DWELLING.

As added by Acts 1977, P.L.342, SEC.1. Amended by P.L.162-1994, SEC.1."

You're implying that mere possession of a "police radio" is a misdemeanor in the state of Indiana, period.

The law clearly states that it only applies to vehicular or portable use - NOT to possession of a "police radio" inside of a home or other building.

The law provides MANY exemptions, incuding licensed hams, newspaper or TV reporters, individuals who sell or service police radios, or basically anyone who has some form of written permission (a permit) from their local law enforcement.

In three places, the law makes it clear that there is nothing illegal about having a radio capable of receiving police frequencies in one's own home or place of business.

It would be really strange if ANY possession of a "police radio" was illegal in the state of Indiana, considering that the Electra company, who for all intents and purposes invented and popularized the police scanner with their famous "Bearcat" line, was located in Indiana (before merging with Uniden of Japan in the 1980's.)

I bought the radio from Radio Shack a few years ago.

I just found out that less than a year ago, in 2009, according to the FCC, the motorola t6250 (radio (and other similar raduios) is and always has been an illegal radio completely illegal to use at all because it can do speech inversion,(which is coded messages according to the FCC), even though it has been type accepted by the FCC and approved by the FCC as completely legal to use in the U.S.

The FCC even said such radios are and always have been illegal even though the FCC type accepted it as legal and approved it as legal.

and that it's iullegal to use at all even in non-scramnled mode without speech inversion enabled since it is an illegal radio.

So since the radio is and always has been completely illegal to use even in non-scrambled mode since it is capable of scrambling, the radio is NOT fit for the purpose which it was sold for and sold as

But Radio Shack won't give me a refdund for the illegal radios they sold.

I had no idea at the time I bought the radio that it was illegal since it was FCC-type accepted as legal.

But all the lawyers and judges say "ignorance of the law is no excuse".

How do I get my money back for Radio Shack illegally and fraudently selling me illegal radios under the false, phony, and fraudelent pretense that they were completely legal since they were fcc type accepted and fcc-approved as legal?

Apparently, this is an oversight of the FCC. Some times things just get done automatically. When you have a major corp. producing millions of radios annually, introducing new types constantly, paperwork becomes rather routine.

Midland radio is in the midst of the same legal action against them for doing the same thing. The FCC contends these radios are illegal because the "message is coded". However, as the FCC also does not precisely define exactly what is meant by "coded".

As I see it, the rules are basically saying, sideband operation is not allowed. Which I believe this is how the message is being coded.

What to do with your radio? I'd say use the damn thing as is. As far as you are concerned the radio is legal to operate as is. It is up to the FCC to ensure manufacturers comply with the rules. Not yours, not the vendors.

One option might be to sell it on ebay.

What if you're charged with the henious crime of transmitting a coded message? Hire a good attorney and fight the bastards. You purchased, in good faith, what you believed was a perfectly legal radio and one that was approved by the FCC themselves. Then, don't do business with Radio Shack.

I learned a long time ago, Radio Shack is a rip off on electronics. If you pay $10, the store manager paid $2 for it.

But the radio itself may not be illegal to sell or own. Using it may be illegal.
What does the law say about selling and owning it?

Odds are the PTB at Radio Shack didn't either, though I know no

You can file suit, if you want. Realistically, I don't see you winning.
You would need to prove Radio Shack sold it to you knowing it was illegal. By your own claim, the FCC listed it as legal, so it's very likely the people at Radio Shack who make decisions regarding what to sell and what not to sell also thought it was legal.
You will need to be able to prove they knew the reason you were buying it. Common sense indicates you bought it for use, but common sense and the law aren't always in agreement.
Richard offered a POSSIBLE idea. If it is legal to buy and sell, tyr selling it on ebay. It's unlikely you'll get what you paid for it, but you can get some money.

FYI, the FCC rules state mostly that is illegal to import, manufacture, sell, possess and use such illegal equipment.

The most common of these violations occur when a radio is produced to be used on the 10 or 12 meter ham radio band. With the capability of being used on the 11 meter band which is known "Citizens Band" (CB).

The FCC routinely tests these radios and if the find any way that it can transmit on 11 meters, it is classified as illegal. Manufacturers do so to avoid the "type accpetance" requirement and to sell their radios to enthusiasts known as "truckers". Buying one can cost you $10,000 and the loss of your radio.

For the law itself, read up on "illegal CB radios".

Dumbass, ham radios don't come with echo crap. As that is illegal as hell.

There are lots of ham radios with echo on:

http://sales.kb9rqz.com

Check out the Rangers, Magnums and Galaxys Mark has for sale. Those are ham radios and they have echo. So shut your fucking pie hole.

Read the frickin rules a-hole. Guess which radios are on the banned list? The very ones you mention. Do ham radios come equipped with channel selectors who's range is between 1 and 40? 10 meter voice begins at 28.3, well above the 11 meter band.

Dual operation of this type is just not permitted, period.

All Galaxy DX radios are banned.

Echo serves no purpose other than to show off.

http://sales.kb9rqz.com is the source for all of your amateur radio needs!

I got my new radio from Mark and it rocks! Nothing like calling CQ DX on 10 meters with your turbo echo adjusted just right.

I had some asshole crying about my radio sounded like a CB. I just told him to fuck off and turned on my slap-back audio (also from kb9rqz) and repeated my callsign over and over again. He got pissed!!

REMEMBER.....we are the new breed of hams!!

Hey Richard.............
You're one of those dick type hammies, I can tell.
But listen up you shit stain. And listen good.
My elmer is KB9RQZ. I even got my tech manuel at http://sales.kb9rqz.com

I had to study for three fucking days to pass my test.

I AM THE FUTURE OF HAM RADIO !!!

I didn't need any stinking morse code, either !

Where in the rules does it say I can't run my turbo echo on 10 meters?
You can't quote it 'cause it ain't there.

Now be a good hammy and go fuck yourself, little Ricky.

Hey Richard..............
You're one of those dick type hammies, I can tell.
But listen up you shit stain. And listen good.
My elmer is KB9RQZ. I even got my tech manuel at http://sales.kb9rqz.com

I had to study for three fucking days to pass my test.

I AM THE FUTURE OF HAM RADIO !!!

I didn't need any stinking morse code, either !

Where in the rules does it say I can't run my turbo echo on 10 meters?
You can't quote it 'cause it ain't there.

Now be a good hammy and go fuck yourself, little Ricky.

Kb9rqz was also my elmer until someone emailed me this description of him.

http://ve7kfm.com/kb9rqz.html

I didn't realizewhat a lid he actually is. The CCRAA also fired him as their president after they found out what a sexual deviant/pervert he is. You may want to find a new elmer....

FWIW - I bought some GMRS radios at RS a few years back, branded with the RS name, and they work great, excellent range, excellent voice sound and pitch, and they don't chew up batteries either. Tough as nails too - they've been dropped, kicked and soaked, and they still run great. I suspect their output is around 1 - 1.5 w, because they communicate farther and more clearly and easily than any FRS radio with which I am familiar. At $45 the pair, I'd stand by these units anytime.

I have had junk from RS too, but these units are not among them.

I don't invert my speech ;-)

Make no mistake about it, KB9RQZ is a piece of shit. His local 74. RadioShack Pro-51 keyboard repair?

I realize that this isn't a repair group, but has anyone here had experience cleaning the membrane keypad on a scanner? My 15 year old Radioshack Pro-51 works fine, except that I have to press harder than normal on the keys to get the scanner to operate. I haven't opened it up yet, but the keypad may be the conductive type that touches contacts on a PC board. Does that sound right, and can the keys or PC board be cleaned? Thanks ahead of time.

Hi folks. I was wondering if someone who knows a bit more about this can help me out. I have an old Realistic PRO-77a scanner which belonged to my grandfather, which was passed along to my dad when he died, who then used it for years until the city here switched to an 800mhz trunk system. His brother bought him a new scanner, so he put the Realistic in storage for a while, until he finally gave it to me and said to sell it or whatever if I wanted since it wouldn't do him any good anymore, and it was just piled up in the way now, etc.

In the meantime, I found that some of the city's public works channels are still separate from the trunk system and in the 150-160mhz range. My dad used to work for public works, so he likes to listen in when the weather is bad and such. But the scanner he uses isn't like some of the newer ones, and can't track single frequencies and a trunk at the same time, so he has to manually switch in and out of trunk mode and only listen to one at a time.

Well, I'm not only a bit of a pack rat, but I guess the sentimental side of me couldn't part with it. So the Realistic is still laying here. And as I've taught myself more about electronics/radio/etc, I've started wondering about how I might make this thing usable for something again. I mean sure, I could order crystals at all the different frequencies, assuming I could find them all. But it seems like a good learning experience for me to do it a different way. Not to mention, surprise my dad with the results!

What I had in mind was to build some kind of variable oscillator to connect to one of the crystal sockets. The PRO-77a is capable of 30-50mhz low and 148-174mhz high. So the high range is fine for the public works frequencies I want to receive. How to build such a thing is the question, though.

I doubt I could build a totally external oscillator and feed it in there, since the scanner would have components to make the crystal start oscillating and interfere with that. Right?

I also doubt I could use anything crystal-based since they're fairly fixed in frequency as far as I know, so I assume some kind of LC oscillator might work? I don't have any service manual or anything so I have no idea how the internals of the scanner work, so whatever I built would have to pretty much simulate a crystal.

I don't know any formulas to determine the values of inductors/ capacitors to do anything like that, so I'm hoping someone can point me in the right direction. Assuming it's possible, of course. I think I heard about people doing it before though, so it seems like a fun project to try!

I own 20 acres in southeastern Arizona. I am my own HOA and have no neighbor for at least 1/4 mile on either side. I can put up antennas on my roof, in my window etc and only have to answer to me

If I were in the city, I would tell anyone who complains to go to hell. I paid for my house and it's my property.... I stay out of your business, you stay out of mine.... (be reasonable and fair) I of course would not put up a 200ft tower but something big enough to receive or get a decent signal out....

I had a SONY 2010 and would often have a long wire antenna stapled to the roof or strung between trees. Some Anennas hide better than others...

Hello,

Hope this for-sale doesn't violate any protocols, but thought someone here might be interested.

Have a Uniden 996T for sale.
Am in my 70's now, and frankly haven't used it for the past year.

Perfect condition, both operationally and cosmetically.
Always used indoors.

Also have my "Butel Arc996 Basic" keys for their software program I purchased that I'll provide. Also a copy of the install program (but no guarantees if it will work)

Have everything that came with the unit, except I can't find the 2 plastic "keys" for the units easy removal from the DIN-E sleeve if mounted in an auto. Will keep looking.

$ 350. Too old now to start learning PayPal or eBay, so would request cash, or a Bank Cert. Check.

More than happy to meet in Sudbury, MA Library for anyone to play with it a bit, if desired, and you live locally outside of Boston.

If not, I'd pay shipping and insurance.

Contact me at Xrgsrose@comcast.net (remove the "X")

Thanks,
Bob

Hello,
I am looking for a program for Windows Vista so that you can record sound when there is sound. I've tried several (eg scanrec) but you should speak directly into the microphone for recording the sound. If the source is 2 meter away, the sensitivity of the input signal has to be so high that the noise of the microphone itself is being recorded. That is not what I want but maybe I am doing something wrong. So I'm looking for something that is voice activated, but also works when the source a few feet away. Maybe by setting a range of frequencies which have to be recorded.

You could add a CTCSS decoder to it, but it will cost over $100. You should investigate a Radio Shack PRO-163 or 164 refurbished at overstock.com. They support PL/CTCSS decoding.

it might be appropriate to decrease the extension of the microphone by the use of adequate competencies.
as a consequence it should be helpful to detail the supervision of the microphone .
now after discussing about sound as well as the design of microphone , it might be appropriate to detail the bandwidth management of the microphone efficiently.
now it might be better to develop the authorization of the microphone accurately

Why would you want to? It's only a estimated reading of the actual signal anyway. You'd be better off buying a newer scanner with that feature.

I got some declassified CIA documents regarding the A-12 crash near Wendover Utah. In the 400+ pages, there is a chronological log of the events of the flight. This particular page notes the radio stations and beacons used with the planes ADF. Of interest is a beacon on 377KHz, noted as both XTS and STB.

www.lazygranch.com/images/cia/wendover/xts_stb_earth_377.jp2
You will need irfanview with the plugings to view this document.
http://www.irfanview.com/

Any ideas on where this NDB is located? Note that many of the beacons on the list are now history. [Austin was converted to DGPS] so this is probably an historic beacon as opposed to operational.

I call bullshit. Ohio Revised Code Section 2953.08 guarantees the right of appeal.

I think I'll send this one into snopes.com for verification.
However, I wouldn't be to surprised if Ohio had passed such a law.
There was another jerk a couple of years ago that was mouthing off about some law in title 49, which covers the trucking industry. Only problem is, the number used was one of those that had been repealed.

First of all, Every manufactured electronic device has a little sticker on it that says "This device must accept any and all interference".

Furthermore, it is highly unlike that any ham radio unit would cause such interference to a 900mhz cordless phone. As the frequency increases, it becomes more difficult to send a signal with the same power. Not to mention that most manufacturers include various filters to keep those signals out of the equation.

As for CBers interfering with cordless phones, if one ever does, I'll be sure not to buy that brand of phone.

Do you have a wireless keyboard? Like one from logitech? Look at that little sticker on the back. 27mhz. Guess what? Hello. That's in the CB band. They use a channel that is set aside for "Remote Control" (RC). So your neighbor's kid little RC car could be on the same frequency and you wonder why the keyboard is screwed up. So this alleged law could also effect any RC device as well as common computer devices.

Can we just end this with HORSEHOCKEY!

What is amazing though is, this is an actual law!
http://codes.ohio.gov/orc/2909.04

However, this does not mean that a ham radio operator could be charged for doing so while transmitting a signal. It does mean that a person who deliberately causes disruption to public services, with something like an explosive device, most certainly will be.

As usual, you have twisted and mis-stated the facts, and blown everything completely out of proportion in order to make this Ohio law "fit" your persecution complex.

It is clearly stated right in the first paragraph (A) of the law that it only applies to individuals who DELIBERATELY and KNOWINGLY, (i.e. with criminal intent), interfere with emergency communications systems, broadcast stations or the like - either by on-air "jammimng", or by causing physical damage or vandalism to emergency or public communications infrastructure.

The law is in the category of crimes concerning ARSON.
The wording was twisted to make it appear that transmission of radio signals causing harm is a criminal offense. That is NOT what the law says at all.

29009.4(A) merely defines what is meant by "emergency public service".
Which includes ham radio and even CB radio. Both of which can be used in emergency situations.

in a USENet newsgroup, I have to ask: have you taken more definitive steps to get this addressed? Like notifying the ARRL. They most certainly would have something to say about it. Or FCC? FCC has dominion over communications issues, and has ruled specifically on the issues of interference, antenna installation, and the HOA CC&R's limiting of TV, and satellite antennae installation.

Have you taken your complaints there?

Or are you just flailing against 'the man.'

Make no mistake, I'm fully aware of the war on radio hobbycraft in this country.

But screaming 'fire' in a crowded NRA convention may not be the better way to accomplish your goal.

This radioguy is a DUFUS, and has a long history of reading a ton of BS into local Statutes that have to do with Radio Communications.... I, and MANY others, have refuted his BS, but he continues to froth off at the

at the Commission, and 99% of his conclusions are bogus from the get go.

Sure, In the Commissions Rules and Regulations (Title 47) there are Rules that state that to be Eligible to Hold a Radio License in the USA, one must be of "Good Character". The definition includes such things as not being convicted of a Felony Crime while using Radio Communications, Not being convicted of a Felony Crime of Violence, Not being convicted of Wire Fraud, or a number of other lesser Crimes. If you have ever had a License Revoked, for ANY Reason. Violation of the Secrecy Clause of the Communications Act of 1934, as Amended. (although I have never heard of a prosecution for this). If you have been issued a Violation Notice and not Responded, and it went to a Hearing, and Revocation was part of the Judgement. I heard of a fellow that owned a small local Radio Station, that was issued a Violation Notice for Tower Lights not operating properly, He choose to not respond to the notice, and when the Field Agent "Pink Slipped" the Transmitter, and took it off the air, he removed the seal on the Power Switch, and went back on the air after the Agent left the site. The Agent came back the next day with a Federal Marshal, and they put the guy in the Slam, and revoked the Station License for that station and start proceedings to revoke his Class A Citizens Band License, Ham License, and Land Mobile Licenses, under these rules, as not being of "Good Character"... The Administrative Law Judge wasn't impressed with his Court appearance, and granted the Commissions Revocation requests on all counts. He did time for the Tower thing, and lost everything....

Just a note here: FCC Field Agents do NOT have Police Powers, on Land or Sea... but they can, and do, have the ability to get a Federal Marshal for Land, and a USCG Officer for Sea, to enforce the FCC Rules and Statutes if that is the only recourse. When doing Vessel Inspections for SOLAS Compliance, I have had to get a USCG Officer to make a Violation Notice stick, on a couple of occasions, and had to get a Federal Marshal a couple of times, for Interference with Safety Communications Issues by stations on Land. One of those was for a Cable outfit with a VERY Leaky System, that was taking out the local Cops Repeater, the USCG local Marine CH16 Vhf Receiver, AND the local Airports Approach Frequency, all at the same time. That was a GIANT MESS....

Me Memories from time gone by....

You would be surprised, I found a new one last year at a small store in a small old town they had on the shelf for years but it was still new. A good used one would be fine if I can locate one. There was just something about these scanners that I liked. Thanks for your reply.

Uninformed jibberish snipped

They are talking about cloning radios on trunked networks
The problem a cloned radio causes is that if it is using the same ID as another radio it will log onto the system, the system can not allow two radios with the same ID in so the problem is that when a Police radio is turned on but it's ID is already logged on the radio will not be allowed access to the trunked network

The cloned radio that is logged in means it also is able to transmit on the network, the only way to remove the offending radio is to block that ID, but this means that they need to reprogram their radio with that ID to give it a new ID

Trunking scanners do not need to log into the system to follow signals across the network so do not cause any problems

Please do some research before posting silly comments

And the reason Police are pulling you over all the time has nothing to do with there being an antenna mounted on your vehicle

So how does problems with unauthorized transmitters justify outlawing receivers? And isn't it already illegal for civilians to transmit on frequencies assigned to police, per FCC regulations?

What use is assigned to the frequency band in question, anyway?

There's a difference between transmitters and receivers. Duh!
Are there any consumer devices which are receivers only but it's easy to modify them into transmitters as well? I doubt it.

If you want to outlaw transmitters on a particular band, that's got nothing to do with receivers.

The bill does not outlaw receivers or scanners used by individuals. Don't depend on the accuracy of anything "radioguy" posts in these newsgroups, as he consistently distorts and misinterprets existing and proposed radio-related regulations and legislation to make himself look like a "victim".

Better to go straight to the source, such as:

http://scannerfood.com/news/HB5194.htm

There IS a provision in the law seeking to prohibit re-broadcasting police communications on the internet via streaming audio - but that is under debate in the legislature.

Read my post as to what they are trying to stop it has to do with cloning trunking radios which transmit to access the system so that it can follow the system as it switches freqs and lockout the radio who's ID has been cloned

Under what provision? The only exceptions to the use, U.S. Government radiolocation (primary) and Amateur use (secondary), inside the United States are:

1) Certain land mobile uses in Detroit, MI, Cleveland, OH, and Buffalo, NY, and

2) North of "Line A" (defined at 47 CFR 97.3(a)(26) - roughly paralleling the U.S/Canadian border 50 miles distant).

Amateur operation in 420-430MHz south of "Line A" may continue as long as it doesn't cause harmful interference to the above mobile users. I don't see Illinois as among those users.

in the Buffalo, New York area. Sections 90.273 through 90.281 address the specific rules applicable to these bands. Use of these bands is also subject to the general technical standards and application procedures contained in other subparts of part 90. The technical standards applicable in this band are the same as those contained in subpart I of part 90 for the 450-470 MHz band. Private land mobile use of these frequencies is

6/4/10 - MEL07 Shutdown

The troubled MEL07 repeater located at the Pentland Hills in Melbourne's west has been shut down possibly never to return and the committee that oversees MEL07 and other repeaters across Melbourne have not ruled out turning off more services under their control if trouble continues.

A committee spokesperson told UHF CB Australia that 'It was a very tough decision to make, but one that could not be postponed any longer" She went on to say that "It is sad that a handful of CB'ers are ruining a hobby that so many find so enjoyable"

Melbourne over the last few years has seen the return of a record number of repeaters to the metropolitan area but unless things improve we may see a return of empty airwaves, Something that looked like it was going to be a thing of that past.

That is what I was wondering, I'm sure that band's primary user is the U.S. military and Amateur radio users are secondary users. I'm sure it is against several laws for any police agency to interfere with our military. The Air Force has been active in protecting their part of the 70 cm band in two places in the US.

the tv news said that if a cop or resident calls an emergency number on their home phone or cell phone and can't get through because there is rfi by someone transmitting on a radio or someone else talking on the same frequency the person or cop's phone is using. they can be arrested under this law for interfering with emergency communicatiomns.

Now that sure sounds like they're talking about rfi.

If it's only means people using explosive device to blow up a cop's cell phone or resident's cell phone, how is that person going to be able to dial it when it's in pieces and why would they be expecting an answer in such a case?

It definitely means rfi.

So in Ohio, a ham can no longer legally use the 900 mhz ham, 2.4 ghz or 5.8 ghz bands even though federal law says you can, because someone miight try to dial emergency services and only hear the 900 mhz ham repeaters when they call or the ham on the input frequncy or simplex.

Furthermore, the news said any rfi.

Again the news specificically mentioned "radio frequency interference".

Which means even if the ham is operatung 2 meters, 70 centimeters or hf bands and the residents' phone or cop's phone is overloaded from no sheilding, the ham is the guilty party guilty of committing an illegal act while the part 15 drvices without any shielding are ptotected by laweven though federal law says the exact opposire of the state law.

And no, they did not say cb and ham are protected. They're only protected if a cop or resident is using the cb or ham radio to make an emergency call and someone inteferes with it.

If you're not in prison, you might as well be.

I'm the third generation of my family to own this house, and I love it.
I grew up here, and I have a lifetime of fond memories. It is mortgage-free. But if I lived in the type of area you describe I'd move

This isn't about OTA TV reception. In the overall scheme of things, that's unimportant. It's about all that other crap.

Yes, the FCC fact sheet for the OTARD rule states that "The rule does not apply to television antennas used to receive a distant signal."

They should complain to the local franching and consumer agencies as well as the FCC, unless the issue is with local wiring in the home/residence.

The stations presumably weren't distant when they were analog The rules exclude larger antennas for receiving distant signals, That term, distant signal, is apparently the FCC regulatory term of art here and was developed to describe a signal normally imported by cable systems via means other than over the air reception.

http://www.museum.tv/eotvsection.php?entrycode=distantsigna

http://www.nielsenmedia.com/glossary/terms/D/index.htm

It seems to me if the local cable system can get the signal with a standard over the air antenna mounted on a high enough mast, that would not be a distant signal.

If your homeowner's association won't budge, then it may be necessary to petition the FCC to make a determination and enforce their rules if they determine those stations are not distant signals. But that won't help you with the next question about a shared community antenna, only with an individual antenna on a mast located in an area you control.

A shared community antenna is likely out of the question unless the homeowner's association agrees because the wiring and other parts of it would likley be installed in areas they control and individual residents don't.

Are you REALLY such and Idiot, that you think your interpretation of the Statute is the way it is... what a Morooon... Bugs Bunny Definition...

the simple FACT is that any unlicensed Part 15 Transmitters and Receivers MUST NOT interfere, and MUST accept Interference for any Licensed Transmitters in the same Band, PERIOD. That is Federal Statue as part of Title 47... This supersedes ANY State or Local Restriction or Statute, that some Yahoo local Politico thinks would be nice to pass. All one would have to do when the case came before a Judge, IF it EVER Went That Far, would be to trout out the Title 47 Statute and the Judge would dismiss the Case Post Haste....

I just read in another newsgroup a post by a persn who lives in a hoa
He can not put up an antenna for broadcast reception even though federal law says hoas can not prevent people from putting up antennas.

the way the hoa got around the dederal law is by outlawing him and everyone from putting up any antenna masts at all..

Since they outlawed the antenna masts and not the antennas, as far as the hoa is concerned, they'tre not breaking any of the federal laws about them not being allowed to ban people from putting up tv antennas.

Bullshit. IF, as you say, you are constantly being stopped, questioned or otherwise harrased by the police, it is undoubtedly because either by reputation or behavior, you have given them reason to believe that you are a whackjob who is potentially a danger to yourself, or your community.

In 35 years of amateur radio mobile and portable operations, in almost all 50 states; in dozens and dozens of towns, cities and villages, I have NEVER been stopped, questioned, detained or otherwise bothered by any law enforcement agency - even when driving vehicles literally festooned with antennas. With one exception, no cop has ever given me a second look, even when I have operated portable H/Ts in public locations and events right in front of them.

The one and only time a cop ever showed the slightest interest in one of my radios, it turned out that he was a fellow ham. He was thinking of buying the same model H/T I was using, and wanted to know how much I had paid for mine.

With your rambling, incoherent posts, you're only convincing people that you are not playing with a full deck. Nobody believes a thing you say - why do you bother?

You don't have a clue - not one, single clue. NO municipality anywhere can "force" a covenant onto a property that does not already have one.

A restrictive covenant is an addendum TO A DEED, and a deed can ONLY be changed if, and when, a property is sold or transferred to a new owner.

Barring a sale or transfer, no change or addition to an existing deed can be imposed by any municipality or court, period.

The only thing a court MIGHT do, is to rule that an existing covenant is invalid or unenforceable, which is the case regarding deed covenants which were once very common 50+ years ago - covenants which prohibited a property owner from selling their home to anyone not of the caucasian race. Though such racially-based restrictive covenants may still exist in the deeds of very old homes, they are null and void under current law.

why aren't the police out catching some real criminals? Trust me, the police have no vlue to radio,tv, or electronics. I and several other people have consistently been pulled over and/or stopped and/or arrested by police stating phony radio laws they had/have no idea about.

Such as all CB radios are illegal for American citizens to possess unless they have an amateur radio licencse which specifiically permits amateur radio operations on the standard 40 CB channels.

By stating that I must follow that law and ordering me to do so, and telling me I would be arrested and piut in jail if I didn't, the police officer ordered me to commit a federal crime.

They also told me it was against the law for me to have an Ic-R3 radio. Because they are police radios the police talk to each other on.

By doing so, the police officer just admitted that he and the whole police department are guilty of breaking federal law.

I was told it was against the law to have a shortwave broadcast band converter/reciever in my car.

It only picked up the shortwave broadcast bands, nothing else, and not even all of them. It could only pick up the stations like BBC, Radio France, Radio Nederlands, etcetera, not even ham radio.

I and other people have heard the police and fire departments using frs and gmrs for their dispatch and other operations.

And if a citizen l(who is unaware the police uses it) listens for a minute on the channel, hears no one and transmits they are arrested and jailed for "transmitting on a police channel" even though it is no such thing.

And if they try to get out of it, the police will say it is a private police channel the citizen was illegally transmitting on because the police bought it and it even said right on the package "private line" which proves that it is a private channel and sincxe it is a private channel, no one else should be on it.

So as you can see, the police have no idea what the radio laws, rules, and regulations are even though they try to enforce them by trying to enforce non-existent laws, rules, and regulations.

Amd the written fcc rules don't helpm uch either since even English grammar teachers agree the way the fcc rules are written say that all CB radios are illegal for American citizens to possess.

What the FCC needs to do is reword the passage stating police have authority over illegal cb radios in a way where the polive won't think all cb radios are illegal and where the police understand that they do NOT have authority over legal cb radios.

Then again, even if teh FCC does that, it still won't help much since as you can see from all of the above, the police are intent on enforcing non-existent laws, rules, and regulations which don't, didn't, and never did exist anywhere at all in the first place.

And no, I was not speeding when any of it happened. One time I was driving. (the shortwave radio), the other time I was on foot (the scanner) and the other time I was parked in the legal parking spot in a park during legal operational hourss during the day for less than two minutes.

I did not even have time to get out of my car berfore teh officer came zooming up to arrest me simply because he saw ONE antenna on my car which was a legal CB magmount antenna.

Well the reason you want to prevent any of these local or State RFI laws to be passed is because to not be cited by the law you must either go to court to have the court rule the law null and void or wait until cited and hire an attorney to defend you. If the local judge doesn't see it your way then you have to appeal to a higher court and the lawyer fees for those kind of appeals start at about $25,000.

A lot of people think you can just waltz into court and get a law voided, but in reality it will take more action because all the State has to do is argue that their law is legal and get the local elected judge, who received donations from the local HOA's for reelection, to agree.

wrong again. The police there have interpreted the law in exactly the way I said they would interpret it, which is what I was warning against, and 100 percent of the people posting here said the police there would not interpret it in that way.

The intention of the law is exactly what I said it was. Because what all the other posters here said the intention was did not make any sense whatsoever given the text of the law.

The police interpreted the law exactly as the law's intentions were meant to be interpreted.

It might be an illegal law, but what I warned against has happened using that law.

here's the proof:'

I drive a F-150 and have several radios

In my 1988 F-150, I had 4 antennas mounted permanently (through hole in roof) in a line don the center of the cab. I would hit the beams in garages and it was difficult to park some places

Now, I have 3 magnetic antennas, I can take the antennas down if I go through a car wash

If you have a truck and radio equipment, how do you mount you antennas ??

Am considering adding a roll bar to the front part of the bed right behind the cab. I will have the roll bar be slightly below the roof line and able to pivot should I need to go in a parking structure or car wash

"it has happened using THAT LAW"

Wrong. The example you cited avove happened OVER 14 YEARS AGO. The law in question) was just recently passed. The example you gave has absolutely nothing whatsoever to do with the current law.

I'm not saying that someday, somewhere, an incompetent, power-hungry, overzealous cop or prosecutor might not attempt to misuse/misapply the latest law in Ohio or Illinois to go after someone who is innocent of any wrongdoing. Such judicial misconduct has happened before, and will no doubt happen again. But as always, you have distorted and overblown the situation.

By trying to connect an incident from 1996 to present day legislation, you only (one again) make yourself look like a complete fool. You destroy your own credibility every time you do this, which calls into question the validity of ALL your opinions.

You damage your own case by your own words, time and time again.

in tennessee they give you plates which say "emergency" when you appluu for ham plates.

But having legal license plates issued to him by his home state of Ohio was part of the reason Joseph LaVey was arrested by thee cops in north carolina since the cops said his legal plates issued to him by the dmv are fake.

Maybe instead of getting and having ham plates, he should have had these plates his home state of ohio issues to regular people (the general public) to anyone who wants them just because they want them.

http://www.bmv.ohio.gov/sp_ohio_cops.stm

then just maybe he might not have been arrested.

Son, by no stretch of the imagination would anyone who has read your long, rambling whacked-out posts describe you as being "normal".

But, by all means do go - and the sooner the better. You are one of the biggest trolls here - you're a fine one to be accusing anyone else of trolling.

Can't blame you for trying to hide from history the tripe you spew.

Still waiting for you to post sources from the supposed news articles you rant about. You always seem to fail when you are asked to back up your blather with fact.

You are seeing that, too?

This guy is posting crap simply to stir things.
I doubt that he is a licensed Amateur Radio operator and I can attest for

230. Uniden BCD996T Unable to restore any groups after disabling all groups withinin a system

From: Jimmy <boltupright@live.com>
Message-ID: <htq1sj$9f0$1@solani.org>
Source record: 834

My question is about the Uniden BCD996T scanner. I have a "conventional system" called Air Traffic which includes four groups for various airports in my area. Each group contains several frequencies for that airport. Sometimes, I want to listen to just one airport, not all of them and I use the group quick key to disable the airports I don't want to listen to. However, I recently disabled all of the groups within the system and now apparently there is no way to turn them back on. I keep getting "nothing to scan" message. I can turn the "system" on and off with it's quick key, but I can not turn on any of the groups within the system. I use FreeSCAN software to program the scanner and save backups of my programming. If I delete the system from the scanner and re-upload it from a file using FreeSCAN, it works again, but surely there is a better way. If not, this is a serious bug, because if you ever turn off all the groups within a system, there is apparently no way to turn them back on again. Any help would be appreciated.

Thanks,

--Jim

Ham installations have federal pre - emption over any regulations that hoa's, town or city governments, states, or anyone else can pass. the simple solution for these people is to get a ham license, even a technician license, which any 10 year old kid could get if he studied for a week, and join the ARRL. Put up your ham antenna, or scanner antenna, whatever you want to, and when they start giving you crap about it, call the arrl, and tell them all about it.
then, sit back and see how they like getting fined 500 dollars a day for interfering with a government emergency installation ! the FCC will come down on them like a ton of bricks.... It really doesnt matter what the antenna you put up is FOR, since if you SAY it's a ham antenna, it falls under these protections. Endlessly bitching about it on these news groups is not going to solve your problems. Remember this: ANY effort on their part to prevent you from operating, putting up an antenna, ect, is going to be a regrettable experience for them... One they will remember for the rest of their miserable, controlling lives...

I believe that the amateur radio antenna preemption applies to regulations by government entities only (zoning laws, etc.) and not to regulations by private entities (HOAs). This is in contrast to the television antenna preemption which applies to both of the above categories.

Now, I just got done, in another posting, explaining this: If you don't have a ham license, then GET ONE. HOA's, State, County, municipal governments have no "right" to pass ANY regulations regarding Ham Radio installations. Ham radio installations are GOVERNMENT EMERGENCY INSTALLATIONS, and as such, they have FEDERAL PRE- EMPTION over any regulations passed by ANY State, local, town, city, or HOA. Get a ham license, join the arrl, and when they start messing with you about it, call the arrl, and tell them what is going on. Because they are willfully interfering with a government radio installation. Let's see how THEY like getting fined 500 dollars a DAY for such interference....

Restrictions ARE Deed Restrictions, (read Private Contracts) not

248. Upgrade From A GRE 500 ? Opinions ?

Hello,

Have been away from the hobby for a while now.

I have a GRE 500 handheld unit, which I like very much.

I understand that GRE has had a new handheld unit out for a while.
More bells and whistles than the 500, I guess.

I'm in my 70's now, and frankly not that sharp with unerstanding the technical specs anymore.

Might anyone please outline for me, and describe, what the new one offers over what I have now ?

Worth considering an upgrade ? Why ?

BTW: Is there an even newer one expected "shortly" ?

Live outside of Boston, and use it mainly to monitor local PD and FD, as well as some Aero from Hanscom and Logan.

Much thanks,
B.

I assume this program supports the Pro-84 as well, but how about the Uniden BC95XLT?

I have all three scanners, which are really all the same. It would be nice to have one program usable with all and able to share data files.

I went to your web site as indicated below, but could not find that kind of information.

The new unit is a Analog Trunk tracker the 310X/410X. It is an upgrade of the 300/400 series due out in the Fall of 2010. The 500 is the latest Digital Trunk tracker from GRE. GRE is also set to release a clone of the PRO-107 iScan radio and Uniden will announce their 'iScan' version on July 1st.

I'm probably wasting my time here, but I have a rare one for sale.

I bought it factory fresh in 2004 from a dealer in CA who quit the business in 2008.

It's a beautiful rig, but I don't use it any more and figure someone out there will. It's in absolutely UNUSED condition and comes with the original box, manual, accessories, leatherette case, ALL the slot cards, an extra 800MHz Austin antenna, and an attribute consumer versions DON'T have.

I'm only looking for a fraction of what I paid for this kit, so if you're interested, you'll have to drop me a private email for the terms of the sale. I guarantee your satisfaction, and 3 Day shipping to your door.

Seeing is believing and I'm prepared to forward a photo, but only by request. Please contact me at: tulsa...@yahoo.com

Hello,

For an antenna to be mounted in my attic, and for the typical scanner

Scantenna brand antenna ?
Why ?

Also, am I right that the Scantenna is Omni-directional ?

Thanks,

The scantenna I am sure does have some Gain on UHF freqs(none on VHF) and they are better on certain bands

The Discone is Unity gain(no gain) across it's freq range but is a true wide band antenna(will still work on HF freqs right up to highband UHF)

Both are omnidirectional of course having either in an attic will lower reception on both. Is there a reason for not mounting it outside, even on the side of the building or hidden inside bit of PVC tubing on the roof(in the case of the scantenna)

AOR receiver/scanner AR-5000, AOR Spectrum Display Unit SDU-5500, Timewave DSP-59+ w/15W speaker, all inclusive package, also includes the AOR AS-5000 antenna switch, allowing front panel switching of up to four antennas, all operating manuals, plus the AR-5000 SERVICE MANUAL. The AR-5000 covers everything from 10KHz-2,600 MHz (less cellular), 1,000 memories (actually 2,000 if an extra 1,000 service memories are selected booting into service mode, described in the manual) and has more features than I can list. Includes a app so you can program everything from your PC. Used 99.9% for FM voice in the 900MHz range, due to it's outstanding performance there, so if you have in depth questions, please consult the operators mauals, easily Goggled, or email me for links to manuals and photos. Everything is in like new condition, includes all cables for the AR to SDU, audio to/from DSP, etc.. Factory p/s for the AR, wall wart for the DSP, but the SDU will need a 12VDC supply (it's shared with another now). Everything shipped to CONUS $1,695, USPS MO, or add $50 for PayPal. Bank or personal check, but with two week delay to ship. BUT WAIT, THERE'S MORE: if you're anywhere near NW Arkansas, and will come pick this stuff up, saving me the cost and trouble to pack it up, I'll throw in FREE the AOR DS-3000 discone antenna, along with the mast, tripod, and ~50' prime coax (not RG58, but satellite stuff, forgot the #), email for photo and antenna specs. Hello,

Am trying to get some data bases in order, and would like to ask the following, please. Modes, knowing the correct ones, has always been a bit of a problem for me.

Am in my 70's now, and would appreciate any help, very much.
Still enjoy the hobby a lot, though.

My main question: are the FBI frequencies that are not encrypted like 163.900 and 170.300 all FM ?

and,

a. Mil Air: I've been assuming AM, but are any bands or frequencies USB ?

b.HFGCS Mode ?

c.Navy Giant Killer Mode ?

d. Air Refueling Mode ?

e.Norad Huntress Mode ?

f. FEMA Mode ?

g. LODAC (not even sure what it is; might it be LODOC ?) Mode ?

Much thanks,appreciate the help,
Bob

HF is USB
VHF/UHF air band mostly AM with some FM in the UHF
Normal land mobile VHF/UHF would be FM MilSatComm low band UHF is mostly FM

this is pretty much the same internationally

Given that he's dead, prison would be as stupid as your claiming anyone thinks possession of a copy of the Constitution is illegal.

Pure horsehockey.
Post a link to the actual story.

The reporter hadn't done his homework. McVeigh was quickly arrested on numerous federal charges, none of which included the Constitution.

During the 40's there was an immigrations act that was passed into law in which the very part declared that possession of certain anti-government documents was illegal. Which led up to Mr. McCarthy and his witch hunt for finding out who was a communist. I believe, the Supremne Court ruled that was unconstitutional because it violated a couple of amendments and other federal laws.

Since the Constitution sets the framework for creating the government, how can it be anti-government? If it were, the entire judicial system would be illegal.

It was down yesterday for me also. It could have been a DNS cache

Where do you get the idea from based upon this article?
Nothing in the articke said anything about getting busted for driving a look alike cop car, marked or not.
No judge in his right mind would make a person pay a fine for that bullshit.

Hell, I had my 1963 Plymouth Belvidere decked out with rear deck lights, overhead lights and antennas and people thought I was a city detective because their cars were similar. Not once got pulled over by a cop for it.

A friend of mine bought a county cruiser at an auction. He never repainted it. He had more antennas on his car than the county cop cars did. Nobody ever pulled him for it.

The young dude was arrested because he had a weapon(s) in the very near Radio Guy is way off base again.

I drove a 2006 Taurus for four years. It had three antennas on it.
One was a VHF antenna...it was for our Sheriff Dept.
The other was a UHF antenna...that was for our MDTs.
The third was for the silly CB bands.

And my Taurus had red/blue lights in the upper, darkened area of the windshield. They were hidden by the tint.
It also had red/blue LED lights behind the grill. They were also hidden, as was the siren.

I drove this Taurus for years, in many jurisdictions, and never once had any officers do a traffic stop because this Taurus "looked" like a police car...which it was.

And Radio Guy? Even when I was out of my jurisdiction...even in a neighboring state, if I saw a brother officer in need of assistance I would activate my emergency lights and assist the officer.
I never once had a brother officer refuse my assistance or tell me that I was out of my jurisdiction.

We stick together. It is part of the brotherhood.

I got a GRE P/N: 30-0028 800 MHz rubber angle antenna included when I ordered my PSR 500 scanner on EBay. The extra antenna was a freebie thrown in with the sale. The problem is that it will only screw on halfway. The stock OEM antenna fits perfectly. But this folding antenna will only screw on halfway just a little shy of the point where the antenna base pins would normally drop into place. It doesn't matter if I push down on the antenna while screwing it on, it just won't fit.

Is this a common problem or just a one off exception? I was thinking of selling it, but I don't want to pass on my problem to someone else.

three things that can cause that on a BNC connector, a bent center pin or dirt in the wave washer within the 1/4 turn collar. or dirt or debris up in the 1/4 turn collar itself..

Can this be cleaned in some way? The collar seems to be locked on the Screw on a BNC? There are NO screw threads on a BNC.

It's not threaded. There are two diagonal guide slots on the antenna collar that fit over two pins of the antenna base of the scanner. The antenna is supposed to install by pushing down slightly and giving it a 1/4 turn clockwise until the antenna base pins settle into a depressed groove at the end of the diagonal slots.

The angle antenna I got is new but it doesn't have any give when being pushed down over the antenna base of the scanner.

...Which means that it is NOT screwed on. It is put on with a 1/4 twist.

Screw: screw (skr) v. To rotate (a part) on a threaded axis.

There are no threads, therefore, it can't be screwed on.

If its new, then probably someone at the factory put two wave washers or crimpped the slotted collar improperly.

short of forcing it. not a lot you can do about it..except

I would NOT try to force it onto the scanner BNC. too much chance of causing damage to the plastic case on the scanner. I would try using a disposable or scrap BNC connector, put some WD-40 on it and work with it.. see if it can be losened up. else, chuck it in the circular file..

Is there a repository of old Police Call books anywhere for purchase or download in PDF format? I'm looking for either the 2003 or 2004 edition (that had the Pozilla software CD). I just want to get a copy of the entire book in electronic format.

Thank you for any help.

I'm looking for a website that has live scanner feed(s) for Los Angeles County Fire, also Police, in the West Valley, Topanga Canyon, Malibu areas. Is it possible to get this specific, I'd like to know what's going on (especially fire-wise) when the sirens go by my house as they've been going all day today.

Thanks, jc

308. re-viving Regency HX 1500 scanner

I have an old handheld scanner, Regency HX 1500, never used it much but it's been stored for many years. I'd like to power it up to see how it's working...but the battery compartment has the blue crud on most of the terminals. In the past I've tried to clean this off with rubbing alcohol but it always returns. Is there a better way to do this?

I could also try to run the scanner with an adjustable power supply, but the metal tag on the bag lists two power sources: AA Ni-cad batteries 9.6vdc and/or AA battery 12vdc. If I plug in the power supply through the "charge receptacle", which voltage should I set it for? And should I use the negative or positive pin configuration on the power supply.

On the radio where you plug the DC power connector in should have the voltage and the polarity for the power

Use that as a reference and then use a power source to match the radio not the other way round

Try a small amount of white vinegar on the terminals, followed by electronic contact cleaner.

Each year there were 9 regional editions issued.
Getting just the CD in electronic format will not work.
Each book had its own CD that required you have the book to unlock the CD.
Thew unlock code would be a word from a certain page of the directory.
To access the users manual you had to have an internet connection.

The POLICE CALL frequency directories came in the following versions:
volume 1 Northeastern states volume 2 Mid Atlantic volume 3&4 Upper midwest volume 5&8 Rockies and Central USA volume 6 Atlantic Southeast volume 7 Central Southeast volume 9 West Coast

Thanks for the suggestions, I'm glad to have an alternative to the alcohol.

This scanner must be set up for recharging, it has two charging terminals about an inch apart, and in between these is a hole with a pin inside. The letters "CHG" are below this hole. The tag on the back of the unit says this:
Power
AA Ni-Cd battery 9.6V dc
AA Battery 12V dc
Caution: Install proper batteries before using charger.

I was presuming I could plug a power supply into the hole with the pin, but I'm really not sure about that.

Social workers are called the "nice police" by UK existential psychotherapists.

Some people forget that they are agents for the state,
not for the individual.

What you need to do is carry a gun with you.

TROY — Amateur radio enthusiasts are abuzz on the airwaves over a traffic ticket Steve Bozak received Sunday in Troy as he talked to his buddies over the very same frequency.

Bozak, who owns an antenna company and has been using so-called “ham” radios for 34 years, was pulled over at the intersection of 15th and Hoosick streets while on his way to breakfast with fellow enthusiasts of the technology. He was slapped with a ticket for talking on a cell phone while driving, and he said Officer Mark Millington dismissed his claims that the radio was not in fact a telephone.

“He assured me that I could not be speaking on that cell phone while I was driving,” said Bozak, who lives in Clifton Park. “I mentioned to him politely that it wasn’t a cell phone but an amateur radio. He assured me that it was all the same.”

The section of New York’s vehicle and traffic law Bozak was cited for violating, 1225-c, requires a phone to be “in the immediate proximity” of the driver’s ear. It defines the types of communication devices it applies to as ones “interconnected to a public switched telephone network … provided by a commercial mobile radio service.”

On its face, the statute does not appear to refer to devices like a ham radio, which transmits its signal across the same airwaves as devices used by emergency personnel to communicate with each other and with dispatchers.

Such radios do not require the user to place the device to his or her ear — they are typically played over speakers — and need only be held while the user is actually speaking.

New York is among eight states with a law banning the use of cell phones while driving. Washington’s law specifically excludes ham operators, who must first be licensed by the government to use the airwaves.

Bozak, who became licensed in 1976, said he believes the bulk of users have the devices in their vehicles. He said many are up in arms over the ticket, and some were audible on a scanner Wednesday voicing their displeasure over their radios — many of them while driving.

“I don’t know how many cops I’ve been around in how many different states, but nobody ever said a word to me,” said one man whose job takes him on the road.

Ultimately, a Troy City Court judge will decide whether the ticket issued to Bozak is acceptable under the state's law.

Sgt. Terry Buchanan, the Police Department's spokesman who worked traffic patrols for years, said he doesn't recall this issue coming up in the past. He said the department would have no comment on the matter because it is still pending in court.

Bozak is scheduled to appear on June 23, and he said more than a dozen fellow radio enthusiasts plan on being there with him.

He faces a $100 fine, according to the statute.

"I'll have my day in court, and we'll see how it goes," he said. "But I certainly have every intention of pushing this politely, and through the right methods, to get it resolved."

The date may be pushed back because Bozak has requested a supporting deposition from Millington, who is typically assigned to Troy's public schools and rarely works traffic patrol.

Bozak wants Millington to detail what happened and explain how he was breaking the law.

"He's going to have to prove that I was on a cell phone, which is going to be hard to do," he said. "I wasn't on a cell phone."

Talking on a cell phone while driving is distracting. Hands-free is not an excuse - and it's not safer. There have been studies to demonstrate this. If hands-free operation of a cellphone is legal and handsful operation is not, it's because lawmakers are either idiots or they want to continue talking on their cell phones while driving. Try brain-free cellphone operation (it's called putting the cell phone on "silent ringing" (NOT vibrate) and letting voice mail take messages which you can handle when you reach your destination or stop for gas or a restroom break).

>I'm very sure the New York cops would still give me a ticket for using Hold it or not hold it, it's still not safe if it's a cellphone.

I suspect the nature of the conversation has a lot more to do with why ham radios and cb radios are safer, if, in fact, that's true.
I don't think there have been any studies investigating this for ham radios and cb radios.

Handsfree on cell phones is not safer and it should be illegal to use it while driving.

Some cell phones with bluetooth allow you to originate a phone call with your cell phone in your hip pocket (so you can't press ANY buttons on the phone, or get it out of your pocket without removing your seat belt) by pushing a button on your earpiece, speak the name of who you want to call (this required voice training ahead of time), talk, then push a button on your earpiece to hang up. This is not safer, but it's a much better approximation to real hands-free.

It should be self-evident to even a child that in this day and age, walking into an airport wearing a shirt festooned with wires, batteries and blinking lights is an extremely BAD idea. Have you never heard of suicide bombers? The fact that the shirt is actually a star trek product is irrelevant. How is the TSA supposed to know at first glance that the shirt is "an official Star Trek product" and not some kind of bomb vest?

Yeah, 25 years ago, nobody would have cared, but circumstances have changed. There are appropriate places to wear such a shirt, but the security line at an airport is most definitely NOT one of those places.

You could go to a toy store and buy a legally-marketed, legally-purchased toy plastic gun, but what do you think would happen if you walked into an airport, or a bank, or a police station with that (admittedly legal) toy gun in your hand? You'd be damn lucky not to get your head blown off on the spot - and anyone idiotic enough to do such a thing would deserve it if that happened.

It's appalling that you're so stupid that somebody actually has to explain this to you. You have about as much common sense as a pile of rocks.

Thats easy Tholen. One just waits in the men's restroom at the Institute for Astronomy. Then one sticks their cock thru the hole in the stall wall. When one feels another's mouth on their cock then one knows that they are, in fact, receiving oral sex from Tholen.

What does your ridiculous question have to do with OS/2, Tholen?

There is no such institute in the town of Tholen in The

Why would you ask such a question here? The answer is readily available on the web sites of the three networks you mentioned.

>>>You can be assured that all planned developments will contain antenna restrictions. It is in the land >>>developers best interest and makes sense. They do not want 100 ft. towers springing up. In fact, there is a >>>phrase about operating rf transmitters, excluding the obvious garage door openers etc. Is there room for >>>verticals and wire antennas? I would think the answer would be yes.

They don't even want antennas on vehicles. Not even if you're just visiting.

Before, I have had my vehivle towed for violating homeowner association rules and had to pay so much money to get it back out of impound, money that I couldn't afford to pay, which ruined my credit for the rest of my life. And I don't even live in a homeowner association. I was just visiting my mom there. And that place did not have a homeowner association when she moved into the trailer park. It was added later.

And when I visited at my uncle's house in a different city, the hoa complained to him about the CB antenna on the car in his driveeway, fined him, and said it would be towed away if they ever saw it there again.

He does NOT have a car with a CB antenna. That was MY car. So far, I have never ever signed any agreement with any homeowner association at all. I live on non-hoa non-CC&R land.

What gives you nazi hoas the right to tow MY LEGALLY REGISTERED CAR for violating hoa rules when I NEVER EVER SIGNED ANY fricking agreement with any one of you?

Just because I'm visiting one of my relatives, none of whom could find any place without a hoa attached to ity anymore.

And no you can not "just buy a house without any hoa or cc&Rs".

Several counties' laws through zoning law and other law now requires any non-hoa non-CC&R homes to have permanent CC&Rs requiring joining a hoa added to it before the owners of the non-CC&R non hoa houses are allowed to sell them.

So the very act of purchasing a non-hoa non-CC&R home automatically makes it a CC&R hoa home.

And besides, as I said, I don't live in a hoa cc&R home. I cirrently DO live in a non-hoa non-CC&R home.

So how is purchasing one, if I could, which I can't, because of the newer laws, solve that problem???

I was STILL towed for violating homeowner association rules of places I was visiting when I do NOT live in a homeiwner association and have NOT signed any agreements at all with any homeowner associations.

I have NEVER signed any agreements with the hoas who towed me.

The traler park did npt have a visitors parking area because the hoa owner of the trailer park required all visitors to park in the driveways of the person they were visiting.

My uncle's house did not have visitor parking area because it was his own driveway in his own house and that city has laws which say it is against the law ro park on the street at all, either side, no matter what time of day or night or what reason.

So it is now very very clear that the FCC has comitted the federal crime of fraud when they fraudently said that hams "can just operate mobile".

You can NOT operate mobile when your car keeps getting towed for violating the homeowner associations' rules of "no external antennas allowed on vehicles" and "no ham or cb antennas allowed on vehicles" when you DON'T EVEN BELONG to any hoa and NEVER SIGNED ANY agreement with any hoa at all.

Just because you're visiting family and friends who live in homneowners associations, the only places left anymore.

And no, you can't sue. 1. It costs much more to sue them for it than it does to pay to get your car out of impound for violating homeowner association rules that you never agreed to and that the homeowner association doesn't have to tell you what the rules are since you're a visitor instead of a resident."

And people have spent over twenty thousand dollars in legal fees just trying to defend their right to park in their own driveways when driveway parking was allowed but the rules of the two hoas in charge of the place conflicted with each other.

2. Most lawyers will not take such cases anymore because they will be disbarred for doing so, since it is a "conflict of interest" since most are now required by the counties,cities, and/or state to have agreements with the hoas and hoa developers to defend them.

3. There have been so many lawsuits brought against hoas that most courts are now refusing to hear the cases involving hoas unless they're sure they can rule in favor of the homeowners' associations and against the homeowners.

And in California, because of the number of hoa court cases filed, California, by law. ruled that all hoa disputes must now be settled only through arbitration and not in the courts because it was overburdening the couyrt system.

I haven't even visited some of my family in years.

I'm sure their hoas would definitely tow my car and/or fined them or me for it ljust like all the other ones did.

And I can't afford such tow bills to get the car out of impound, or the fines.

Now the question is WHY did the FCC commit the federal crime of fraud by fraudently telling radio operators that they "can just operate mobile"? WHY ?????

And how do we operate out CB radios mobile when our cars keep getting towed and impounded by homeowners associations we never ever made ANY agreement at all with since we live in non-hoa non-CC&R houses?

And you don't even need an antenna on your car for it to happen. This issue is BIGGER than just radios.

It also happens if you just have "amateur radio plates" on your car without any antennas or radios at on or in your car.

Because homeowners associations don't like amateur radio locense plates on vehicles either, even if there's not any antenna or radio in the vehicle.

They also tow visitors for violating the homeowner association rules of what color car you are and are not allowed to have, what make and model of car you are and are not allowed to have, what type of vehicle you are and are not allowed to have.

What gives you nazi homeowner associations the right to tow my car and have it impounded just because it's blue, a color you don't allow under hoa rules, when I NEVER EVER SIGNED ANY agreement with you at all???????

Now there'sd even some municipalities requiring mandatory for homeowners to simultaneously join three homeowners associations for the same house!!!!!!!

Of course, the rules for each condlict with the other two.

One only allows your house to be painted blue because all the other colors are ugly and bring down property values while blue is a pretty color that brings up property values and the hoa rules specifically say "homes are not allowed to be painted any ugly color".

while the second hoa says houses are only allowed to be painted red because all other colors are ugly and bring down property balues while red is a pretty color that brings up property valuesd and the hoa rules specifically say "homes are not allowed to be painted any ugly color".

while the third hoa says "houses are only allowed to be painted green because all other colors are ugly and bring property values down while green is a pretty color that brings up property values and the hoa rules specifically say "homes are not allowed to be painted any color".

If I lived in a home requiring three hoas like many do now, which I don't, I would paint the one house red, blue, and green to follow all hoa rules except that wouldn't work either since doing so also violates all of the hoas' rules.

You CAN't paint it red while not painting it red, or paint it blue while not painting it blue or painting it green while not painting it green.

hmmm... Since I would be getting fined and the house having a lien put on it either way in that case, I may as well go all out and paint it all three colors that are both not allowed to have that color painted on it and required to be the ONLY color the house is allowed to be painted.

On second thought, in that case, I may as well go all the way and paint it in glow-at-night colors purple and pink with polka dots bought one of these dirt cheap on ebay to play with. says it tracks motorola type 1 and ii systems as well as hybrid analog. anybody still use these systems?

if i program the trunk freqs for my local twp into a bank for the trunking system, will it follow converstations?

Where do you live? What kind of system are you trying to listen to? If you do not know, or are not sure, the Radio Reference page is often a great place to start.

live in montgomery county, pa...they have some info on their website, but nothing specific. they tell you what freqs the trunking system uses, but not what type of system it is.

It says this is Motorola Type II SmartZone. Most of this you can listen to.
Anything with an A means analog, that scanner can pick it up.
<http://www.radioreference.com/apps/db/?sid=724>

Countywide Police Talkgroups
East System Police Talkgroups
West System Police Talkgroups

That is just the Trunked Police, They list a lot of conventional too, which that scanner also can pick up.
There is also Fire, and a whole lot of other stuff listed there in your area. Should keep you busy a long time.

cool! Thanks much!! I paid $40 for the scanner, but I don't know if this area has been 'retrunked'...so if this works, it'll be a damn cheap scanner. the scanner says it can copy type II systems...but from what I've read, most radio systems have been 'retrunked'..so we'll see

I think what you are trying to say is re banded. For several years now the FCC has been talking about this. Some one dropped the ball with Nextel, letting them use frequencies too close to the ones they were licensing to Cities and such. Not all area's had this problem. We have the same system here and it has never changed. If they do reband then that scanner will not work on the 800 there.
A couple easy ways to tell. If you have the manual try to program in some of these frequencies.

866.03750 866.32500 866.55000 866.77500a 867.13750a 867.65000a
868.45000c

If the scanner will take them, you are in. You can also set it to service search in the Police 800 band and see what it's picking up. It's an old scanner but if the towns have not rebanded it should work fine.
Have fun!

>>>So is he violating the law? After all, a ham license grants one thing, and one thing only - the right to transmit on frequencies allocated to the amateur radio service. Nothing else. It doesn't grant a right to listen on non-ham frequencies, but here in America, that right is presumed for everyone, not just hams! (With the exception of cellular) So this non-ham with the amateur transceiver under his dash, a rig that receives police frequencies. Where does he stand? And if HE has no right to listen to police, then a ham license doesn't grant that right, since it authorizes only transmission in ham bands, but does not address reception. If that fella has the right to listen to police frequencies, then the scanner law is invalid for everyone, not just hams, and should not be on the >>>books anywhere.

The federal ECPA law which states it shall not be unlawful to monitor police transmissions.

Federal law supercedes any local or state law.

Federal pre-emption.

Glad it worked, and you may well be safe for a while then. The system is not that old and was most likely quite expensive when they bought it. The problems with the frequencies let out to Nextel showed up in time that many places already knew about it when they set up a Mot. 800. that was why we never had to reband here and so your area may also not have to.
There are of course always sales guys trying to push something new, but with the economy the way it is many places are not willing to tell the voters they want to buy some new toy (system) when the old one still works fine.

Actually, companies can do just that.
Being owned by a French company means nothing.
If the company policy says you may not use two way radios on that property,then you can be charged with trespassing for doing so.

Can a company deny an officer of the law entry because he is armed?
Yes they can. Companies that produce hazardous materials do it all the time.
I do not know the legality behind the issue of a search warrant, if a company can then deny entrance as long as the officers are armed.
After all, a company has the legal right to protect itself and it's employees from possible harm by outsiders who could possibly ignite the place on fire.

Not in my house. Without my permission to enter they would have to obtain a search warrant served by an actual officer of the law.
They are private citizens. They have no authority.
When the FCC makes a bust, they do so with the local cops who do the actual charging.

Simply by the fact that you own an RF device does not legally grant them entry. An inspection is not probable cause to enter without a warrant.

I'm sure some have been busted for illegal radio uses and fined but that was only because the judge wasn't educated on the subject.

After all, just how many inspections can a handfull of people do?

In some areas of the country, failure to abide by Company Rules can result in the CEO calling in the Police, who can charge you with Malicious Trespass. The police can then confiscate your radio and, if you resist, they can charge you with Resisting Law Enforcement, which can be a low-grade Felony charge. And subsequent to an Arrest, according to the Supreme Court, the officers are then allowed to do do a search of your vehicle.

Federal Officers are obliged by law to turn off their radios when on private company properties where the CEO has banned the use of two way radios.
If the U.S. Marshals refuse to do so, the CEO can then call in the local Prosecuting Attorney who can then cite the Federal Officers and confiscate their radios if necessary.
The Prosecutor, if the CEO files charges, can also cite the Federal Officers for carrying weapons on restricted property...usually a misdemeanor that results on only a small fine and thirty days in jail. They only have to surrender their weapons for thirty days and will have them returned upon release.
The law also states that the local Sheriff MUST record the serial numbers of the Federal Officers' weapons and that it is incumbent upon the Sheriff of the County to secure these weapons "in a safe and secure manner". Since these weapons are Federal Property, and should the Sheriff fail in his duties, said Sheriff can be charged with Neglect of Office and can be subject to criminal charges.

Little known fact is that the Feds lack arrest authority on private property. They MUST call local law enforcement to make an arrest and the Feds have to show a Warrant, which the local PD is obliged by law to verify before taking anybody into custody.

The same holds for cell phones, which ARE two way radios.
This as been upheld in several court cases, such as Detective Lon Smith vs. Walmart in 2006.
Walmart Security confiscated the Detective's cell phone when the Detective was calling for backup when needing assistance with his arrest of a group of Gypsies who had stolen several leather coats. Walmart security confiscated the Detective's cell phone before he could complete the call for backup and the Court ruled that this act was well within the paramaters of the rules and regulations set forth by Walmart. The Detective was subsequently terminated for violating company rules.

> Can a company deny an officer of the law entry because he is armed?
> Yes they can. Companies that produce hazardous materials do it all the Companies that have high security in mind can not only bar law enforcement officers from entering their sites, they can use physical force to disarm any sworn, armed law enforcement officer who demands to enter their sites. Some companies can even have the law enforcement officers' squad cars towed to a private storage facility and charge a Storage Fee to the agency in question.

In fact, in many states the Company can, if the Agency does not pay the storage fee within 72 hours, legally dismantle the squad car, part for part, and sell the items in auction.
However, Federal Law prohibits the private company from selling any firearms or ammunition that may be in the car. That, by law, must be inventoried and returned to the Agency within 45 days of the confiscation.
Also, as per a mandate put in place by the Attorney General's office in 2007, all emergency lighting and sirens must be returned to the Agency in question.

Also, posession and use of CB radios in Manufacturing areas is no longer a chargeable offense. The Teamsters Union petitoned for, and was successful in their efforts to force the FCC to change that portion of the Law.

This change, however, applies to trucks that are over ten tons gross vehicle weight. It does not apply to pickup trucks or most vans and it does not apply to passenger vehicles.

I hope by posting this that I can make radioguy aware of the new laws, Federal and State.
I want him and his followers to be on firm, legal ground when reading these posts.

Thats great,

and just be glad that your area hasn't the idiots in charge , that we got.
they went to a P-25 digital system and all medical talkgroups have been encrypted, so no scanners work ..big whoop...
(did,nt listen to the medical before the change so no big thing for me,) but the whole concept of going to a common system for the metro area was to insure that all services could work and communicate.that just went out the window. no-one can talk to medical and medical can't talk to fire or police . stupid anyway, glad the 2050 is working for you..

Actually NO, the FCC would bring a Federal Marshal with them to do the Heavy Lifting, in such a case. The FCC Field Agent does NOT have Police Powers and therefor requires the Federal Marshal to do the arresting, or if it is a on a boat or Marine vessel, they would get a USCG Officer.
they would only use the local Police, if no Federal Marshal was available, and the need was critical, and urgent.

A reTired FCC Field Agent... who has called on both the Federal Marshals and USCG, to provide the Muscle on various occasions.

The question is, can an FCC inspector legally enter a home on the ruse to inspect an RF device, with the home owner forced to comply?
Not in my house you won't. I don't give a damn how many marshals you got with you. No search warrant, no entry. The court would side with me.
If the lower court sided with you, then I'd have to take the issue to a higher court before you got a dime.

See the 4th amendment. "Citizens have the right to be secure in their home....".

Would you allow a cop to enter your home because he wanted to see if you had any drugs with no search warrant?
This is precisely why we have the 4th amendment.

I don't think they care anymore, if you don't let them in they will just file a "notice of liability" or something near those words, fine you $25,000 and let you beat your head in court defending yourself.

The FCC was granted power to do this, like it or not.

I am sure that radioguy is well aware of the rules.

Section 97.1 13(a)(4) of the FCC rules prohibits "messages in codes or ciphers intended to obscure the meaning thereof, except as otherwise provided herein.. ."

Therefore the use of something like Morse code is perfectly legal Morse code is not ciphering, it is a valid means of communication.

Australia had a Natural Disaster back in 1974 when a Cyclone just about wiped Darwin off the map

in the following days there were Police sent from other states to help out. but it was a nightmare as they all had their own radion equipment and it was completely incompatible making radio comms almost impossible

The State Govts got together and formulated a "Police Band" with 64 channels from 467.850MHz to 469.425MHz to be used Australia wide so that no matter where they were sent comms was possible the Motorola got into the Police around the 2000 Sydney Olympic Games and convinced them to go for an P25 digital radio system, The same as being used by the ACT and Northern Territory Later QLD also went the same.

However Tasmania went for an 800MHZ Ericsson EDACS system
South Australia went for a 400MHz encrypted digital trunking system Western Australia went for a 420Mhz non trunking digital system and Victoria went for a 400MHz encrypted digital trunking system

Now the only stated capable of communication between states ins
NSW/QLD/NT and ACT

the rest have completely incompatible systems

so much for their disaster plans

These people need to have their butts kicked hard in court.
No HOA has authority to persecute someone who has not signed the agreement.
They sure as hell don't have authority outside of their property, which is what a public street is.
If a judge is siding with the HOA, then that means the judge is taking kickbacks from them.

You need to research the state law on what all it allows an HOA to enforce.
That clause you give sounds fishy and may not be legal.

What do they do when a cop shows up at a house? Have his car towed and fine him for the infractions?

Here's something you can try. Gather up 20 or so CB'ers and have them come park in front of your house on the street. Make sure they all have visibile antennas. When the tow truck shows up, advise the HOA people he's violating the clause because of his two way radios. Not to mention his 'Obnoxious activity'. Then, call the cops and file charges of grand theft auto on them.

BTW, aren't HOA's requried to have elections for the board of directors? What's preventing you from getting involved and getting on the board?

My brother is on his HOA's board now and he wasn't even looking for the job.

It's time you took legal action these assholes.

If this is in arizona here's some legal information for you.

Section 1. Title 33, chapter 16, article 1, Arizona Revised Statutes, is amended by adding section 33-1815, to read:

33-1815. Community authority over public roadways

Notwithstanding any provision in the community documents, an association has no authority over and shall not regulate any roadway, easement or other area for which the ownership or use has been dedicated to a governmental entity or that is otherwise under the legal authority of a governmental entity. An association has jurisdiction over only those roadways, easements and other areas that remain under the ownership of the association.

So if you are now fined by the HOA, take the bastards to court and challenge.
IOW, the HOA can not legally fine anyone, resident or not, for any parking infraction on a public roadway. Even if they use the "obnoxious activity" clause.
They would have to prove that the roadway is their property and has never been "dedicated" as public use. If the community is not gated, nor have the streets marked as "private property", they are screwed.

Hi I have just purchased a base scanner (Commtel COM205) once I got it all set up I was given a Realistic Pro 2042 with aerial, I have also ordered an MRP-2000 MK2 pre-amp, I am a little bit akward as I would like to connect everything up as follows,

2x aerials into coupler then into the pre-amp, split out of the pre amp into the two scanners,

I dont know how fussy the scanners and pre-amp are with relation to impedance/ load so I would like to draw on everyones vast knowledge and seek advise.

Thanks

That lot should work fine as long as you use proper diplexer for the two antennas(why two antennas though? are they for different bands??)

and just a normal antenna splitter from the amp to the radios use 50ohm cable, splitter and diplexer and you'll be sweet

I was thinking about using two different antennas as They are different styles and I guess they will have different "sweet spots" thanks for your info I think I might just swap between the two antennas until I decide which one is better.

The best option is to have an antenna for VHF and one for UHF close to your favourite bands, this way you have max signal for your favourite stations and they will still work fine for the rest

Hello,

I am working (or attempting to) with the Motorola MT2090 barcode scanner. I have placed some files on the desktop that I am trying to execute. When the device boots up I am able to see the desktop, but it is quickly replaced by the Home screen. I cannot figure out how to get back to the desktop to execute my files. I've browsed to the files through the file manager to execute the files, but they just seem to run in the background.

Does anyone know how to disable the home screen so you can just run files from the desktop?

The city here went to 800 about 8 years ago and I tried several. The Radio Shack 800 one seems to work better than anything else I have tried, at least here. I can seem to pick up things well until the Police get so far away the radio in their car is having trouble getting through.

I have a Radio Shack Pro90 which I am in need of a service manual or at least a schematic for this thing. The squelch is stuck open and as a result only the trunking scans properly. Normal channels won't scan because of the problem it has. If someone has either available and can scan the appropriate section I would greatly appreciate that. I'm not sure of the Uniden version of this, but most likely this is the only thing that may be found. I'm sure Rad Shack never did release any information on this thing to anyone.

Thanks in advance for any assistance.

Although Federal law says it is ok to listen to police transmissions - many states have laws about scanners mounted inside vehicles. This is to prevent a criminal from using a scanner in the commission of a crime - good idea.

And those states - just about every one of them, exempts licensed hams from those laws. The main reason is that many mobile ham radios are, by design, able to receive those frequenices. My thinking is that if the licensed ham were to use that knowledge in the commission of a crime, then his radios would also be considered burglary tools and he would have them confiscated just like any other scanner.

Hams also do so much public service and EMCOM, that the states realize that in some cases they may need to listen to public service frequenices in their vehicles.

And yes, this scanner law does exist and the fact that licensed hams are exempt does not invalidate the law for everyone else.

The interpretation as to what "mounted in a vehicle" means, is best determined by individual state statutes. In Florida, for instance, mounted means operating from the vehicle's battery power and an outside antenna attached. Handhelds are legal. Or that was the way it was the last I knew.

The federal ECPA law which states it shall not be unlawful to monitor police transmissions.

Federal law supercedes any local or state law.

This guy is soo mixed up and full of shit it isn't even funny.

Listen, first off, HOAs can only regulate property they own or have purchased. If, in fact, they purchased the property which this house sets on, then they CAN insist that the new owners must sign a CC&R and join the HOA before finalizing the purchase. Otherwise, they can't do this unless the previous owner agrees to this provision.

As for a license for CB operation, this is also a bunch of BS you are spreading around. ONLY the FCC can regulate the operation of CB radio. yes, there was a provision that local pd has the right to investigate complaints involving CB interference and so on, but this does not include the ability to license and regulate the CB operator. Also, if the CB operation is legal, then the locals cannot prohibit you from operating. Junk consumer devices are just that and under Part 15 of FCC rules, they MUST accept interference. This interference cannot be caused by illegal operations, however. The FCC is the only agency who can tell an operator to shut down his station. If there is interference which cannot be eliminated, then a call the FCC will result in an investigation. If the FCC determines that the transmitter is operating within the regulations, then it is the device owner's responsibility to either replace the defective unit or have it repaired so there is no interference.

As for adding filters to televisions and they break - this is impossible. Connecting anything of a filter to a TV will not cause it to blow up, stop working, or break in general. This can't happen - period.

If your "legal eagles" are telling you things otehr than this - they are lying to you. If you are just making this shit up - stop doing it! And if that is the case, you really are the IDIOT everyone here says you are.

When I was visiting certain places,, everyone was supposed to park within the white lines, but my car was over ALL the lines no matter which way I moved it to no matter where I moved it to. The left titre was too far to the left over the left line at the exact same time the right tire was too far to the right over the right time at the samee time the front wheels were too far forwards over the front line at the same time the back wheels were too far back over the rear line.

Why don't they make the lines so that legally registered cars with current valid plates will fit inside the lines? Becaue if they do, then they can't tow you and make all that money from their friends who own and run the towing company and have your car impounded for doing so.

>>>My in-laws don't live in an HOA subdivision but the HOA is making them follow their rules. Their street has >>>just added a new subdivision and it has an HOA. They made their neighbor move his boat out from his >>>driveway and made my father-in-law move his boat and cars to the other side of the back yard because they >>>could see them from the new part. First off, they are located out in the county and aren't part of the HOA. >>>The new subdivision has ONE house in it and nobody is even living in it. Talk about BS. Their fighting it by >>>the way

Yep. the same thing has happened around here. When we moved in, this was a non-hoa non-CC&R neighborhood with many of the houses on the street built by my family. Then just a few decades later, developers building the condos and townhouses requiring non-revokable permanen CC&Rs an d hoas moved into the township and built them so small that a whole bunch of pro-hoa people now outnumbered the longtime residents who built this community and elected their pro-hoa friends to local government positions which then passed new laws that many counties are now passing. Laws which say you are NOT allowed to buy or sell a non-hoa non-CC&R home until you add non-revokable CC&Rs which run with the land forever and REQUITRE the buyer to join a homeowner associationn (or homeowners associations) to the home and property and may not be eliminated by any future law passed by any local,county, state, or the federal government. (according to the laws).

Because of this law, what was once a non-hoa non-CC&R house on non-hoa non-CC&R land on our street is now a couple of townhomes with CC&Rs and hoa restrictions on CC&R land requiring anyone ligving on that land to join a hoa and follow teh hoa rules.

The hoas kerep trying to argue that there is no possible way that CC&Rs and hoas can be added to the deeds of non-hoa non-CC&R land.

Yes they can. I have seen I have seen it done. If they couldn't, there wouldn't be that new two townhomes with CC&Rs and hoas on my street which was prevuiously non-hoa non-CC&R land with a non-hoa non-CC&R house, yet there is.

The original house was torn down and replaced by two towbhomes. yes, just two. so far. With people living in them who are now subject to hoa rules ans CC&Rs.

The original house was torn down because since it was a non-hoa non-CC&R home long here decades before any hoa moved into the township, it was and still is against the law for the seller to sell it until permanernt non-revokable CC&Rs requiring the buyer to join a hoa and follow all hoa rules are added to it and against the law for the buyer to buy a non-hoa non-CC&R house until permanent non-revokable CC&Rs requiring the buyer to join a hoa and follow all hoa rules are added to it.

With so many hoas now near me, but me on non-hoa non-CC&R property, I'll be glad if all of their consumer-grade junk gets constant interference from my legally operating legal CB.

And maybe from an all-band ham radio also if I can pass the ham radio tests, extra class.

Lawyers will tell you you can get sued (and lose) by them for causing damage to their consumer-grade junk if you even so much as recommend they install certain filters (even without installing them yourself and with them installing it theirselves) if something happens to their device after they intalled it becaue of your recommendation to install it.

When his tv goes kablooey in the next year or two he says "He told me to install that certain filter so I did and it ruined my tv which won't work anymore because I used the filter he said to which if I didn't use, my tv would still be working".

And since you hoas like to bring up contracts so much, any ham who moces into a hoa and does NOT put up a huge tower for reliable emergency communications is violating their contract with the FCC that they had to sign when they took a ham test.

For intance, I will someday have to move out of here. The only places left all have hoas and CC&Rs. But a cop has already previously ordered me to have ham radios for effeective communication anywhere I move to.

While you can do some without a huge tower, you can not do "effective" without a tower.

It is against state law here to disobey an order of a cop.

So I have already been ordered by law to violate any hoa covenants any place I move to.

Some lawyers and judges would even say that counts as a verbal contract between me and the officer since I said okay in exchange for not being arrested and taken to jail for having my legal unmodified FCC-approvved 40 channel CB without the required amateur radio license permitting me to have a 40 channel cb and permitting me to conduct amateur radio operations on the 40 channel CB band and ONLY amateur radio operations on the 40 channel CB band. CB communications not allowed on the 40 channel CB band under that license.

Since the FCC does not issue such licencers, this license is issued by the county next to mine. Not my county.

At first I thought such a law was illegal, but most peoplein these newsgroups have constantly and consistently stated that county and state laws are allowed to be more restrictive than federal law.

So since this law is more restrictive than federal law, it is completely legal and I must get an amateur radio license from the county next to mine permitting me to conduct amaterur radio operations, only on the CB band, and permitting me to even own a CB radio since my FCC-legal signals can be heard in the county next to me (therefore illegal by that county's standards and laws) even though I don't reside in that county.

The policr in that county don't like me operating a CB radio which can regularly be heard in that county (completely barefoot FCC-legal CB) without the appropriate county-issued amateur radio license permitting me to even own a cb besides permitting me to even transmit on a CB.

Well, all the legal-eagles are going to get angry at me for this since it is breaking the law, but I am NOT going to pay to get such a permit. I feel that the couinty next to mine has no business telling me what I may and may not own and what I may or may not transmit on, and when I may or may not transmit on when I do NOT even reside in that county.

So they're going to HAVE TO put up with my FCC-legal Cb transmisions without me getting their radio permit, whether they like it or not.

Of course, now the legal eagles will say that I must get such a permit to transmit while I'm within that county, (which I am frequently since it's right next to mine) since it's the law that I must.

Well, I say screw them. AAccording to FCc rules, I don't have to, and the way I read the FCC rules, such laws are illegal even though they are more restrictive than the FCC rules.

The problem is I can't afford to fight them when they ticket, fine, and arrest me for obeying FCC rules instead of their county laws regarding radio transmissions and radio licenses.

To them, the FCC has given them complete authority over all CB radios.

SOMETHING CALLED HR2346

although tyhe following isn't the law of the county next to mine and has nothing to do with requiring radio licenses for cb, it is another town in wisconsin who thinks they have authority to prevent FCC-legal CB radio transmissions if it interferes with anyone's consumer-grade junk.

They say the FCC-lergal cb operator must stop transmitting if it interferes with any consumer-grade junk or else it's a violation of the town ordinance which the cber can be fined and arrested for.:

2) It shall be unlawful to operate any Citizens Band (CB) transmitting equipment with the intent of causing malicious radio frequency interference to Radio, TV, and Telephone Receiving equipment. The scope of this ordinance shall be as outlined in PL106-521 and shall follow all guidelines as set forth in the appropriate Federal Communications Commission (FCC) regulations.

Any CB operator who unintentionally causes radio frequency interference shall, after being formally informed, take any and all necessary action to eliminate the unintentional interference. If such an action cannot be met, the said operator shall cease to operate his equipment until such time as appropriate action can be taken by the said operator to cure the unintentional interference caused. If said operator continues to operate after this time and still continues to cause interference, such shall be in violation of this ordinance.

Any CB operator, who after investigation is found to cause intentional, wanton, malicious radio frequency interference as outlined in PL 106-521 and the appropriate FCC law, is in violation of this ordinance.

Exempted parties are defined as those licensed entities specifically mentioned in Public Law 106-521 and the appropriate FCC regulation(s).

(3) This section shall not be construed to embrace or cover the regulation of any transmitting, broadcasting or receiving instrument, apparatus or device used or useful in interstate commerce or the operation of which instrument, apparatus or device is licensed or authorized by or under the provisions of any statute or federal regulation. (Ord. #3501 - 8/11/94, #3578 - 11/9/95, 3rd Am. Ord. #3998 - 11/8/01 & Ord. #4129 - 11/13/03)

(J) ELECTRICAL INTERFERENCE OF MUNICIPAL RADIO SYSTEMS PROHIBITED.

(1) It shall be unlawful for any person to operate or cause to be operated any machine, device, apparatus or instrument of any kind whatsoever, the operation of which shall cause preventable electrical interference with the proper functioning of municipally owned and operated radio communicating systems of the City.

(2) When it appears to the police department that any machine, device, apparatus, or instrument is causing interference of the type prohibited herein, the police department shall serve written notice upon the person in charge of the machine, device, apparatus or instrument setting forth the basis of the complaint, and thereupon it shall be the duty of said person in charge to cooperate with the police department in determining by actual demonstration thereof whether such machine, device, apparatus or instrument is in fact causing interference of the type herein prohibited.

(3) If upon said demonstration it is found by the police department that any machine, device, apparatus or instrument is causing interference of the type herein prohibited, it shall be the duty of said person in charge within 30 days after written notice has been served upon him to entirely abate and discard the operation of such machine, device, apparatus, or instrument, unless it can be shown that the machine, device, apparatus or instrument can be adequately and practically filtered, shielded or otherwise remodeled so as to permit its operation without violation of this section, in which event it shall be the duty of said person in charge within the said thirty (30) days to properly filter, shield or otherwise remodel such machine, device, apparatus, or instrument so as to reduce said interference to within the limits set forth in this section. In the event such person shall fail to remedy such defects as hereinbefore provided, he may be prosecuted upon filing proper complaint.

And I have news for you hoa nimbys. Several U.S. states depending on the state, have either already passed or are in the process of passing laws making amateur radio by law, a part of U.S. national Homeland Security.

Even though the rest of the world (and the few hoas smart enough to look up the law and their lawyers) claim that is a violation of international law requiring amateur radio operators to "promote international goodwill" since doing so requires amateur radios to help illegally taking over other countries pre-emptivvely which does the opposite of promoting "international goodwill" .

Now before someone tries to arrest me for saying that, it's not me who said that. It's the rest of the world who said that.

>>>Oh, and then there is the fact the my wife gets pulled over in Fairfax >>>and the cops give her shit about not >>>having a Virginia DL, when it >>>isn't her home state. or I should say "closer".

But as usual, the problem is with the locals, not with the feds. Even in your example, the problem you had is with the locals, not with the feds.

From the actions of the hoa nimbys across the country, we can very easily see that this country would be a total mess without the federal government in charge.

I have a PRO-95 (similar to the -93 I think), have for years. It's a great scanner but with the rebanding law certain trunking systems don't work anymore, also doesn't cover LTR or APCO digital.

I'm looking at the new PSR-310, just received approval and slowly coming into all the online stores. No digital but digital's not worth the money in my location, but it covers Motorola, EDACS, and LTR, as well as the rebanding and the UHF mil-air band (which I've never heard/used).

One of the good things about the PRO-93 and PRO-95 is that if you use Don Starr's programs, you get to enter any frequency except cell, though reception isn't as good/is useless depending on the frequency. (mil air doesn't seem to work)

http://starrsoft.com/

Using a -93 or -95 is OK I guess if you use it for ham radio and non-trunking stuff below the 800 MHz band.

I wouldn't buy a non-rebanding scanner off eBay, and I can't believe they're selling them, it's just unethical.

looking forward to getting it. it's only 300 channels, but who can monitor that many? bought an old pro 2050 on ebay but wanted a hand
pro2050 is back on ebay...

i run with the local ambulance crew so like to listen to their trunked motorola system when i'm off duty...and i do communications for the USCG in NY so have their freqs progammed as well..

so far the county is sticking with the old 800 mhz system. i figured if they change, i'll only lose the 30 bux i spent on the scanner you can get ons that do rebandiing for 80-140 or so, but i just wanted something for my local area and for USCG comms...at a cheap price!

Is there any real need in the US to have the 800MHz phone freqs blocked anymore??

Bloody annoying that we, who are not Governed by the US, have to suffer the stupid and unnecessary blocking of 800MHz
In Australia our trunking band finishes partway into the blocked freqs so trunk tracker scanners have problems there was never a law here banning these freqs from radios but we had to suffer it with radios made for the US but sold here

We have had a few "Non US" and even "Made For Aust" scanners here but making them just for our very small market means much higher prices
ie. the "UBCD996T"(UBC=Aust, BC=US) was AUD$1000 or about US$850 and the remote heat RH96 was AUD$400

Is there any action being taken in the US towards having this block removed if the freqs are no longer used for Analogue Mobile Phone Services?

no one mentioned coded messafges except you,, only ciphers and ciphering.

Of course, NOW I see the emcom people finally got their anti-technical attitude passed into fcc law (or fcc rules, if you prefer), ever since the FCC allowed emergency drills by employees, that's about all I hear on ham radio anymore in the evenings and on weekends.

No more technical discussions. just practice emcom drills.

Nothing wrong with emcom drills, but no more technical talk is allowed on ham radio since it's against FCC rules. You can no longer cipher the formulas for the value of resistors, capacitors, and other electronic circxuits because as several people in the newsgroups have already said, "ciphering on ham radio is illegal" and "ciphering isn't allowed on ham radio", and "ciphering on gham radio is against FCC rules".

Emcom finally got their way to eliminate all technical talk from ham radio.

Which was one of the main purposes of ham radio for decades and throughout the whole 20'th century, but no more in the 21'st century.

I can't believe someone can be as ignorant as you sound in this post. I have heard non of the drills you speak of on the air. maybe they are local repeaters where you live - but they are also not allowed to do this every weekend - that would still be against the rules. As for the technical talk BS you are spewing - you're a candidate for the nuthouse.

not as far as i know. phone calls are all digital now. this was a typical example of companies just bribing congress to have their way.

It's a Fuckwit

He seems to be trying to pull some pity for himself
Buggered if I know for what though

But apparently driving around the streets like a fuckwit and getting pulled over for driving like a fuckwit has nothing to do with his driving like a fuckwit. It's because he has a CB antenna on his car

Some "Home Owner Associations" pick on him, not because he's an annoying fuckwit who disturbs the neighbours by acting like a fuckwit. It's because he has a CB antenna on his car

Seems to me that if he didn't act like a fuckwit he wouldn't have to get on here and complain about all the people who have a problem with him acting like a fuckwit

He's also a lying fuckwit
he said he was going and not going to post here anymore

just ignore the fuckwit

454. Realistic PRO-2006 Programmable Scanner, decaying LCD display

Pulled a long-unused PRO-2006 Programmable Scanner out of the back of a closet. After a battery change on the 9 V battery, seems to work fine in all respects, except that the LCD display has become sufficiently faint (lost enough brightness, or contrast) that it's barely readable, with or without the built-in light on.

Any suggestions for kick-starting the display back to better visibility?

Constant exposure over a long period, to heat or direct sunlight can cause an LCD screen to "wear out". I have seen this happen on occasions and a replacement screen usually does the trick.

check for corrosion around the solder joints for the screen could be causing a low voltage may even be a dry solder joint

Otherwise look for a replacement from a wrecked radio "Pro2005/2006"

One of his many lies is the one about an ordinance that disallows a homeowner from having vehicles if they are "Three model years or more" of age. He left out the rest of the definition in which the ordinance states that the vehicles must also be parked "in view of a public right-of-way and are inoperable."
The guy is simply trying to stir the CB types with his silliness.

Anybody that starts their post with an "X-NO-ARCHIVE" is a troll and needs to be ignored. It must be nice to be able to sit around the abode all day and think of this silly stuff. Also notice how he cross-posts the trolling to many news groups at the same time.

I agree with you.
I had long ago accused this person of being a Troll simply because it is so easy to see through his scat.

He apparently enjoys his forays of misinformation and lies.
One would think that he has too much time on his hands.

Apparently Mr. Radioguy has never excictuted heard of a Federal Warrant for Arrest, under Federal Law, served by US Marshals, who by their charter, have jurisdiction ANYWHERE in US Territory.... A US Marshal is the very LAST fellow you want after you, because he/she has CartBlanc in locating you, and serving the warrant that he/she is operating under.

Contrary to popular belief, stretch marks are caused by changes in hormones rather than the stretching of the skin. Stretching of the skin plays more of a role in which direction the stretch marks will develop. If you have bright red stretch marks, this means they are newly developed. They will fade on their own, but it could take weeks or even months. Below are some tips to help lighten bright red stretch marks.

Amateur Radio Newsline Report 1727 - September 17 2010

RADIO LAW: NY STATE HAM WINS FOR HAM RADIO IN TROY CITY COURT
A New York State ham ticketed under the states driving while using a cellphone law has won his case in court. This, after a judge affirms that ham radio gear is not hone the same as a mobile phone. We have more in this report:
Back on May 30th Steve Bozak, WB2IQU, of Clifton Park, New York, was operating his station while mobile when an officer in Troy New York pulled him over and cited him under the states cellular phone ban while driving law. Bozak, whose mobile was a hand held transceiver protested. Rather than paying the $100 fine he decided to take the matter to court. When he initially lost in Traffic Court he appealed the matter to the Troy City Court. It was there on September 8th that judge Matthew Turner found in Bozak's favor and dismissed the charge.
In rendering his decision the judge found that the Vehicle and Traffic Law defines a Mobile Telephone as a device used by subscribers and other users of wireless telephone service to access such services. Also that a Wireless Telephone Service is defined as two-way real time voice telecommunications service that is interconnected to a public switched telephone network and is provided by a commercial mobile radio service.
The judge then continued by noting that a review of 47 C.F.R.20.3 reveals that Citizens Band Radio Service and by inference Amateur Radio as well is defined as a private mobile radio service not commercial mobile radio service. Therefore, the court found that the use of an amateur radio device does not fit the definition of a mobile telephone as defined under the Vehicle and Traffic Law and granted Bozak's motion to dismiss.
For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I'm Bruce Tennant, K6PZW, in Los Angeles.
At airtime, it is not known if the city of Troy will appeal the judges decision in Bozak's favor or will simply let the matter drop. And while there have been several attempts at getting the law changed to specifically exclude radio amateurs operating mobile, to date there has been no interest on the part of the legislature to do so. This means that any amateur cited under it has to challenge it as Seve Bozak did or simply pay the fine. (KS4BZ, others)

Which illustrates what I am always bitching about.....The authorities will beat you down with your own money! They will do something unconstitutional to you, and if you want to protest it, you have to spend your own time and money to do so. And then, they will appeal and/or do the same thing to the next guy, and use the taxpayers money to finance their transgressions. So, the citizenry doesn't stand a chance of a snowball in hell of ever getting on top.

The Uniden Homepatrol - 1 looks really cool, but it's still relatively new. The PSR 500 - 600 models have been around for sometime and their performance is well documented. Support for the PSR models is also very good.

Here are a couple of reviews from Amazon:

http://www.amazon.com/Uniden-Intuitive-Touchscreen-Scanner-Homepatrol/dp/B0045EFZUM

I am a novice to scanning. I got a new PSR 500 late summer for $389 delivery included on Ebay. I chose this model for its digital scanning and easy portability using AA batteries -- and of course its good reviews.

Apples are red and oranges are what you get when you mix apples and lemons. Duh!

Kumquats are far superior to either.

Naturally you want the Home Patrol 1.

I mean, fer Chrissakes, it has the word 'patrol' right in its name. If that doesn't just make you want to throw on a hi-vis vest and direct traffic with an overinflated sense of self-worth at the next hamfest or Skywarn gathering, I don't know what would. Well, maybe an 'official' ham radio ID badge, FRS radio, and a clipboard, but let's start out easy and work our way up.

If you need further proof as to why this is the unit for you, look at the software that comes with it: the Uniden Sentinel software.
Sentinel. Say it slowly, rolling it around your mouth and savouring its unique textures: sen-ti-nel. Goes nicely with 'patrol', don't you think? Why, you could be the Patrol Sentinel! Or (if you could find a couple of likeminded little whacker buddies) the Sentinel Patrol!

SENTINEL PATROL! FUCK YEAH! ONE OF THEM GOT HIS GENERAL LAST MONTH, YEAH!

Seriously, that would be so sweet. Don't forget the lightbars. You will need lightbars too.

The PSR scanners are both triple conversion. You might have to email Uniden for their specs. Curious that such a ballyhooed release of a revolutionary scanner would not be accompanied by list basic specifications.

I have read too many posts about the RS scanners not quite matching the bench mark performance level set by their brother Grecom scanners.
Grecom manufactures scanners for RS so that leads me to believe that there are surely some corners being cut to allow RS scanners to be sold at a lower price point.

A co worker of mine bought a used Uniden analog trunking scanner for listening to police calls at night. I caught the fever and wanted to buy one too. I soon discovered Uniden digital scanners were indeed quite a bit more expensive. So your argument about preference has some merit.

If you decide to get the Homepatrol scanner, post a review.

This guy carries 30 pounds of tools up the ladder with him? Most climbers I know take the end of a line with them, then attach a pulley where they'll be working, then they send the end of the rope back down. Then the ground crew can send up tools, parts, whatever, and you don't have to worry about not forgetting anything but the rope and the pulley.

Maybe he works alone...

The climbers you know probably climb 100 ft towers?

With this tower that would require 3,400 ft of rope, which probably weighs more than the tools and will be very difficult to handle.

With this tower that would require 3,400 ft of rope, which probably

Not to mention the extreme likelihood of the rope getting blown around and/or snagged on any of dozens of appendages (microwave antennas, FM and comms antennas, tower lighting, etc) that are on such tall structures.

You take a messenger rope (3/32") up with you. Once through the pulley and back down that rope is used to lift a more substantial rope, all done by the winch on the service truck. This is a safety feature. People cramp up sometimes.

You usually have a ground crew person feeding the line and watching such things. California has stricter laws than OSHA. I think you have to clip on when climbing here.

9mm static line weighs 57 gm/meter. A 1000 meter loop would weight 57kg or 126 lbs. No thanks. Also, the line has quite a bit of wind resistance and will probably cause the 30 lb tool bag to sway quite a bit in the wind. However, since he rode the elevator almost to the top, he might be able to handle a 50 meter single static line to the top of the elevator.

Nice video. I wonder what they were repairing on top of the tower?
Replacing the tower light?

Press Release

Tower Association Responds to Erroneous and Dangerous Video

The following statement is being issued by the National Association of Tower Erectors (NATE) regarding a dangerous video post erroneously characterizing ï¿½free climbingï¿½ on towers as lawful and common.
NATE would like to publicly denounce the message of the recently posted video depicting two men climbing a broadcast tower. NATE asserts that the posting of the content was misguided and its messages should not be given credence by any viewer.
The ï¿½Stairway to Heavenï¿½ video, reportedly launched by TheOnLineEngineer.org, suggests that free climbing is an accepted method of ascending and descending broadcast and telecommunication towers. The video incorrectly asserts that free climbing is accepted by OSHA and that ï¿½most tower workers climb this way.ï¿½ The video also depicts as standard procedure other dangerous and prohibited conduct not condoned by NATE or OSHA. There are many inaccuracies in this video.
NATEï¿½s efforts to establish a culture of safety in the wireless and broadcast tower industry encourages everyone involved with tower work to adhere to recognized safe practices. The video in question is an example of a climber who is either unaware of recognized safety practices or is unwilling to take the time to protect his life and the life of his co-worker in the video. By extension it encourages others to employ unsafe climbing techniques not endorsed by either OSHA or NATE.
Contractors who refuse to operate safely should never be hired. This video is one more example of why the efforts of NATE, our membership and industry partners are imperative.
NATE, the industryï¿½s leader in tower safety, continues to pursue working relationships with carriers, broadcasters and other tower owner/operators to ensure that only qualified contractors set foot on tower sites. The Association has worked with OSHA to develop safety best practices and educational programs to ensure every tower worker goes home safely every day. Companies which allow free climbing and other violations of recognized safety practices are placing lives in danger and jeopardizing tower work services.

NATE is looking forward to OSHAï¿½s statement clarifying this matter for the industry.
Work Quality in Question
Employers who allow such practices will likely cut corners on other aspects of their work. NATE asks, ï¿½If a company or employee will cut corners with the lives of its workers, on what other aspects of work will they be willing to cut corners?ï¿½ Owners and operators who hire this type of contractor are opening themselves up to legal and regulatory actions and are additionally running the risk of system malfunctions, adding unnecessary costs on top of endangering lives.
NATE Requests Contact From Tower Owners and Operators
NATE is requesting contact from carriers, broadcasters and other entities who own, operate or control wireless and broadcast towers as well as the industry groups who represent them. NATE is doggedly pursuing working relationships with these organizations to ensure that a culture of safety exists throughout the industry and that only qualified contractors set foot on tower sites. If your organization fits this description, please contact Patrick Howey at 888-882-5865 or patrick@natehome.com.

Maybe the weight of his rope for that size of tower is more than 30 pounds....

glad you posted this. when i climb i'm ALWAYS, ALWAYS attached to the tower....althought the highest i've climbed is 155', it really doesnt matter at this point. once you fall more than 15' or so, the results are pretty much the same

Best thing to do is unsolder and remove it, replacing it with a 220K instead.

What the mod does is provide more consistency to the circuit. The stock squelch circuit on the 2004 never seemed to break squelch setting in the same location.

Hope this helps.

i have a car charger that recently causes my scanner to display 'iilegal voltage'. so i took out the fuse and it is a F250v 2A. Before I go out and buy a new fuse (not knowing that is in case the issue), is this fuse in fact strong enough for this radio? I always heard 8000mah was minimum. any ideas/comments?

Check the voltage output of the charger. It could be more than 6

Well, a fuse regulates current, not voltage, and it does so by breaking the circuit when too much current flows through it. The fact that you said the charger "recently" causes the radio to display the illegal voltage notification leads me to believe that previously, you have used this charger without any problem, so the question becomes, what has changed since then that has in turn changed the voltage the scanner is seeing?

So if your scanner is telling you there's something wrong with the voltage, you should first check the voltage being supplied by the charger - which can be done with a simple multimeter. The most common problems are a connector that's loose, or shorted, or the safety clip that holds the connector together is broken, but some component of the charger itself may have recently failed and now be defective - in which case you need a new charger, not a new fuse.

You might also want to check the voltage of the vehicle's electrical system, which can drop too low when you're running the heater/defroster on full blast, using the windshield wipers, etc. Various problems in a vehicle's electrical system which can cause voltage drops should be handled by your usual repair shop unless you're handy with automotive electrical repairs. The voltage can also be too high, as often happens when there's something wrong with the vehicle's volrage regulator - and a defective voltage regulator can also drastically shorten the life of your vehicle's battery so if this is the problem you'll want to get that fixed ASAP!

Hope this helps.

Are you talking about the back lighting or the LCD readout?
The light panel used for back lighting does dim as it ages and requires replacement about every 10 years.
Look for aftermarket replacements on eBay or the usual online retailers.

hoas discriminate against Polish-Americans just because of their race by making a bunch of hoa rules which all discriminate against ther Polish-American culture near Medina as you can hear here:

And yet the idiot courts have beeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeepholding such racial discrimination by ruling in favor of the hoas' illegal racial discrimination.

For many years I parked wherever I wanted (except tow away zones) by putting a fake license plate on my vehicle. (I bought it in a garage sale here in Oregon) The tickets would go to never-never land. I was living in the Bay Area down in California. At one time, I was considering wall papering my whole bedroom in uncolletable parking tickets....:^) They are just another way that government has of collecting taxes from people unfairly. It is your duty to cheat them as much as you can.

Radios confiscated in Zimbabwe

Report: Radios used to listen to VOA Studio 7 confiscated in Zimbabwe

Tony Saxon: "Zanu (PF) supporters and self-styled war veterans here are reportedly moving door-to-door here in an effort to prevent people listening to foreign radio broadcasts by confiscating their radios.
The people from Buhera said the move was to force people not to listen to the radio reports on constitution making process that is expected to begin next week. An [opposition] MDC T councillor Tapiwa Ngorima said: 'All those listening to radio stations broadcasting from outside the country are being told they will be identified, because they are accused of influencing others to support the MDC in the area.' He said there were some incidents reported to police in Buhera but there have been no any arrests made so far. 'We have cases where our supporters lost their radios after the Zanu (PF) and war veterans accused them of listening to Studio 7. Their radios were forcibly confiscated. We have made reports to the police in Buhera but nothing was done to bring the perpetrators to book,' said the councillor. Studio 7 is broadcast through the Short Wave from Voice of America."

Actually, they can. Police and fire emergency services have priority.
If it is deemed that the ham operator is causing interference to the communications, then he can be charged.

Even though 420 - 450mhz is shared, an actual specific frequency might not be.

Just because that radio can transmit on any particular frequency out of the box, doesn't mean you have the legal right to do so.

Actually NO, the LEO can NOT enforce FCC Rules and Regulations, in the senerio above, and should he/she try, they can be prosecuted for exceeding their Authority. An FCC Agent can investigate such violations of said FCC Rules and Regulations, inspect Licensed Stations, and seal Radio Gear in the OFF, non-powered State, Request to inspect a non-licensed Station, but can NOT enter that location if the REQUEST is refused by the OWNER of the Land or Building. FCC Agents are NOT able to Confiscate, or Arrest ANYONE for such violations. If they need "muscle" to do the later, then on Land they go get the local US Marshal, and on water they go grab the local USCG Officer, who CAN, and Will make those things happen, when the FCC Agent has made the case. Lots of LEOs think that they can do these things, but when they get into a court of Law, they find their case thrown out due to the above stated lack of jurisdiction, and if the fellow so arrested, has a Good and Smart Mouthpiece, can actually get significant DAMAGES from the LEOs government. I have dealt with such cases, and invariably, the thing gets resolved by the local Prosecutor, long before they ever get in front of the Judge, because he, if he is smart, researches the Federal Statutes, and reams out the LEO, BIG TIME, and tries to quietly make the whole thing GO AWAY..... if he isn't all that smart, then he gets his ass handed to him in Court, by the defendants smarter Mouthpiece, and if the Judge goes along with the local guys, the whole case gets overturned on appeal, when they get to a REAL court of LAW with a Judge who follows the LAW.....

Actually, they are NOT the same frequencies.

Radios designed for 70cm amateur use are normally limited to transmitting between 420-450 Mhz, and for most FM radios, 440-450 Mhz (the FM segment).
While they can be modified, they are not normally able to transmit out of the amateur band without modification.

420-450 Mhz is allocated to amateur radio on a secondary basis, and to radiolocation (ie: radar) on a primary basis.

In some areas of the country (north of "line A", ~50 miles south of the Canadian border), and (east of "line C", along the eastern edge of Alaska, ~50 miles west of the Canadian border), 420-430 Mhz has been removed from the amateur service, and may be reallocated to land mobile use, subject to coordination with Canada.

47 CFR 2.106 footnote US230 indicates that certain segments in the 420-430 Mhz band are allocated to land mobile service for non-federal uses within 50 miles of Detroit MI, Buffalo NY, and Cleveland OH, which are along, or very close to, the Canadian border.

So, if you are using a unmodified FM radio built for part 97 amateur use, it probably will not transmit on 420-430 Mhz by default, which is the only segment that is reallocated. Since the segment is reallocated, not shared, there is no shared use.

However, there is nothing in the FCC regulations that would prevent a amateur radio operator from using a radio built for part 90 land mobile service on the amateur bands, and such radios are capable of being programmed for frequencies shared with public safety. After all, they are the same general type of radios used by public safety agencies.

It is the responsibility of the licensee to adhere to the conditions of their license.

Very true.. The FCC takes a very dim view of local law enforcement attempting to enforce laws relating to telecommnications, over which the locals have no jurisdiction whatsoever.

Still, interfering (deliberately or not) with public service units such as fire and police are criminal acts punishable usually by state law.

Do not the FCC rules and regs also state that when a public service unit has been issued a license to operate on that shared frequency that said unit has priority over amateur radio service?

Scroll down aways and you'll find a paragraph that states, she was issued a license to operate on "Adjacent" frequencies, but not on actual police frequencies.

If she bought a radio that was capable of transmitting on known assigned police frequencies, then that radio should be banned as being illegal.
As it permits transmissions outside of the allotted frequencies.

Does having a radio that has voice and code capabilities give you the legal right to transmit voice on code only frequencies?
Your viewpoint says yes.

So you're going to continue stating your belief the amateur radio operator is always the winner?
As you can see, the FCC can yank your license if they want to.

Oh so you finally found me here too huh?
Must be really really boring.

FYI, asswipe, the FCC has numerous rules and regs on what is considered to be an illegal radio. One of the most common infractions is a radio that is designed to transmit on 10 meters, but can also be easily modified to transmit on 11 meters, the CB band. Ergo, transmitting out of the legal range.

If you, as a properly licensed operator, operate on a frequency you are not entitled to, even as a ham, you can get your license yanked.

As you ARE a licensed ham, you should know this.
You are required to know it.

I have driven at 190 in a 1975 model car, and my current car speedo reads to 260.

My FT-50 was 'modified' without opening the case.

The correct answer to the question is NO.

However the statement that there are no legally enforceable code only frequencies may be technically correct if 'code' is used in the historical sense to mean (International) Morse Code. The existing 'code' only frequency bands (e.g. 3.500 to 3.600 MHz) also permit RTTY and other data encoding protocols. They do not permit voice (AM, FM, SSB, etc.)

Is that a legally enforceable thing or a gentlemen's agreement?

Its by FCC rule. The regulations specify what emission type (and power) is allowed on what frequencies.

This answer only applies to HF bands in the US. There are CW only frequencies in the 6 and 2 meter bands. Other countries have other rules.

and just how were the MURS users who were travellers on the free way supposed to know that they were "interfering with police frequencies" on 154.570 mhz when they heard absolutely nothing on the channel until after they tried to talk to their friends on 154.570 mhz and the police department transmitted back all p.o.'ed that some people they didn't know (private U.S. citizens) was transmitting on their puiblic safety "police channel" of 154.570 mhz??????

and those travellers were monitoring the whole time on their vacation (travels)
> Still, interfering (deliberately or not) with public service units such as > fire and police are criminal acts punishable usually by state law.

See above. You say they can be pubnished for interfering with the police on 154.570 mhz even though they did not deliberately interfere with them.

As I understand the rule, it is NOT interference if you're (they're) transmitting when you hear no one on teh channel after monitoring it, and not transmitting over the top of them when the police are talking.

But of course, if they could hear the police and transmitted, that would be deliberate interference which they would be guilty of, but didn't and even if they did, which they didn't, is a matter for the FCC to handle, not the local-yokel cops.

So the only way to interfere with them not deliverately is what happened, not knowing anyone else was on the channel ssince they were monitoring it for a very long time, transmitted when they needed to, the the police come back which you claim they are responsible for even though it wasn't delibarate interfering since it was interfering with the police. (Not the way I understand the FCC rules say).

And the police claiming it's illegal delibarate interference for them to transmit on the "police channel" (154. 570 mhz) 9even though it wasn't delibarate since the police didn't transmit unti AFTER they heard the private citizens transmit.)
The FCC rules plainly say that the NURS channels MUST be SHARED and will NOT be assigned exclusively to any one group, person, business, or organization.

And just which public service agency has the FCC ever licensed to use 154.570 MHZ as their main police frequency or their main public service frequency????

Furthermore, just which police or public service agency has the FCC ever licensed to use 154.570 mhz as their police freqiuency or public service frequency???

Before itr was MURS, it was a business band frequency, NOT a police or public-servuce frequency.

Banning radios that can operate on certain selected frequencies is just another of the thousands of unenforceable laws that the liberals love. Why not tax them first, and then ban them? That would be the best of both of the liberals worlds.....

Fair enough.
